Farm programs survive in House

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House Agriculture Committee abandoned efforts Wednesday to dismantle traditional farm programs after cotton-state Republicans refused to give up an elaborate system of loans and subsidies.

A similar effort in the Senate was foundering over opposition from senators representing sugar and peanut states.

The House panel's chairman, Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., said he would move the measure through the House Budget Committee as part of a larger package to balance the budget by 2002.

"I'll be playing a leading role," Roberts told reporters after a closed meeting of his committee's 27 Republicans failed to produce an agreement.

As Roberts' efforts collapsed, the Senate Agriculture Committee also faced a serious roadblock in its effort to find at least $13.4 billion in farm program savings, a 17 percent reduction, over seven years. The committee halted work Wednesday without an agreement following a dispute over programs that help sugar and peanut growers.

The disputes test the resolve of Republicans to alter long-established programs while they are overhauling much newer programs such as welfare.

The farm programs have become ingrained in both parties, with support based more on regional than political concerns.

Roberts had tried to overcome that in his "Freedom to Farm" bill.

The proposal met the new House Republican leadership's need for change while guaranteeing farmers a fixed but declining payment to ease the transition to an end to crop subsidies, production controls and

Roper leaves enduring civic legacy

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – John Roper Sr., a civic leader, clothier and namesake of the Twin Falls High School auditorium, died of pneumonia Wednesday after a tenacious battle with intestinal cancer and Parkinson's disease. He was 76.

His legacy will endure in southern Idaho, however – from the trees lining Twin Falls' Main Avenue, to the still-vital clothing-store chain his father founded in 1909, to the Bradley Boy Scout Camp in Stanley Basin.

Born in Burley, Roper graduated from high school there, then went to the University of Idaho and Western University. He spent five years in the U.S. Navy and two years as an agent for Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. in Boise. He moved to Twin Falls in 1949 as assistant manager of Roper Clothing Co.'s newly opened branch store.

During his life, Roper was most happy when he was working hard and being involved in the community, family members say. He was a member of seven business and community organizations, serving as president of four of them.

He mustered support for the beautification of downtown Twin Falls in the 1960s. He also raised money to buy the Boy Scout camp near Stanley.

Even his debilitating illnesses didn't slow him down. Roper fought Parkinson's disease since 1979. He also battled stomach cancer, which he discovered months after his wife, Alice, died of cancer in 1988.

"I thought it would keep him indoors, but he is such a people person, he had to be out there meeting people and doing things," said his daughter, Vicki Ater, a Gooding counselor for deaf and blind students.

Ailing, but still vigorous, Roper capped his lifetime of good deeds by corralling enough donations for the 1,330-seat high school auditorium that opened in January. The grateful Class of 1993 named the building for him while it was still on the drawing board.

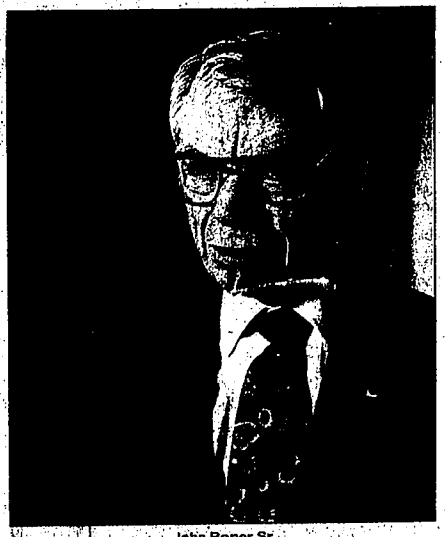

"He didn't quit until something was right," said his younger brother, Jim Roper, who helped him run the family chain of Roper's stores. "I suppose you could say he would almost rather work than play. He enjoyed his work, his involvement with people."

Family members say he remained immersed in the civic and business side of Twin Falls until he was hospitalized Sept. 18.

Roper partly retired in 1990 after four decades of shared leadership with Jim Roper over the Roper Clothing Co., which still has stores in Buhl, Burley, Rupert, Boise and Twin Falls.

But he remained involved in the business up until his

Deal heads off federal shutdown

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration and congressional Republican leaders agreed Wednesday to avert a federal shutdown beginning Sunday, forced by budget gridlock.

After a week of bargaining, the two sides shook hands on a deal that would keep agencies operating for the first six weeks of fiscal 1996, which begins Oct. 1, even though most of Congress' spending work remains incomplete. In the meantime, the two sides can continue sorting through their budget differences and avoid blame from a public that seems weary of stalemate in Washington.

White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta said the pact would for now avoid "drastic" GOP slashes in education, environment and other programs.

The measure "will establish a level playing field, extending the deadline for Congress to do its job and allowing us to resolve the significant differences that remain over budget issues," he said. "We should be able to do that without victimizing the American people or damaging our economy in the process."

Republicans pressing their campaign to cut spending and balance the budget by 2002 acknowledged that the truce on a continuing resolution, the formal name for the temporary spending issue, was only a stopgap measure.

"This CR is not the place to pack a fight with the president," said Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. "I suppose if fights will be had, they'll come later."

Indeed, the agreement meant that only one of numerous potential standoffs between the president and Congress had been sidestepped. The two sides face a bushel-full of battles this autumn over the GOP's proposed reductions in Medicare, Medicaid, other programs and taxes — all of which President Clinton says slice too deeply.

Simpson's defense has its say

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — In dueling summations Wednesday, a prosecutor played O.J. Simpson's recorded rage and the haunting pleas of his ex-wife, and Simpson's lawyer recalled the too-tight evidence gloves, insisting: "If it doesn't fit, you must acquit."

Johnnie Cochran Jr., displaying his flair for courtroom theatrics, at one point put on a dark knitted ski cap to rebuff a prosecution suggestion that Simpson wore a similar one as a disguise the night of the murders.

"If I put this knit cap on, who am I?" Cochran asked jurors.

"I'm Johnnie Cochran with a knit cap on. From two blocks away, O.J. Simpson is O.J. Simpson."

Known for his rapid-fire oratory, Cochran began slowly and quietly, reminding jurors of their duty under the law, apologizing for the trial's length and telling them, "In the journey toward justice, there is no short cut."

Echoing words spoken by Simpson last week while jurors were absent, Cochran told the jury: "O.J. could not, would not, did not commit these crimes."

He picked apart prosecutors' timeline, saying there was no way Simpson could have murdered his ex-wife and her friend Ronald Goldman in the limited time prosecutors say.

Simpson, he said, is a man unjustly accused by overzealous police driven by their own egos.

"Because of their vanity, they implicated an innocent man and they never looked for anyone else," he said.

He cited the "defining moment in the trial" as the day prosecutor Christopher Darden asked Simpson to try on the bloody evidence gloves and the defendant told jurors they were too small.

"Remember these words," Cochran said. "If it doesn't fit, you must acquit."

He repeated that and other phrases to jurors almost as a mantra.

Jurors were attentive to Coch-ran's presentation but showed no reaction to the hat demonstration. By midafternoon, they appeared to be tiring.

At the start of the day, Darden used Simpson's own voice against him, playing a 911 call that exposes Simpson's fury and his ex-wife's plea: "O.J., O.J. The kids are sleeping."

As Simpson sat across the courtroom conferring with his lawyers, Darden depicted the football Hall of Famer as a spurned man, an obsessed ex-husband driven by inner demons to kill.

Woman accuses trio of drug injection

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

JEROME – Three Twin Falls people were arraigned Wednesday on kidnapping charges after an undercover Jerome narcotics informant said she was abducted and forcibly injected with an illegal drug known as crank, causing her to overdose.

Ben Hathaway, 33, and Patricia Miller, 18, were arraigned Wednesday. Cheryl McRoberts, 32, was arraigned last week. All three were in custody Wednesday evening at the Jerome County jail on $50,000 bond each, according to Julie Bryant, deputy clerk at the Jerome County Courthouse.

Somehow tipped off that she was a snitch, the trio of former drug friends showed up at the woman's home early Sept. 17 with a 12-gauge sawed-off shotgun, said Detective Dan Chatterton of the Jerome County Sheriff's Department.

"You are coming with us," the gun-toting McRoberts told the woman when she answered the door, Chatterton said. Trying to confirm she was a narc, they drove her to the Jerome Police Department in search of an undercover car she had ridden in during an earlier drug buy from McRoberts, he said.

Failing to spot the undercover drug car, the trio drove the woman to McRoberts' home in Twin Falls, where they held her down, injected her with what was apparently methamphetamine and dumped her, clad only in a blanket, at her grandmother's house, Chatterton said. The woman was hospitalized overnight for a drug overdose, he said.

The victim, who lives in Jerome and has several children, helped police with information that led to a police undercover purchase of $100 worth of "crank" from McRoberts on Sept. 6 in Twin Falls, Chatterton said.

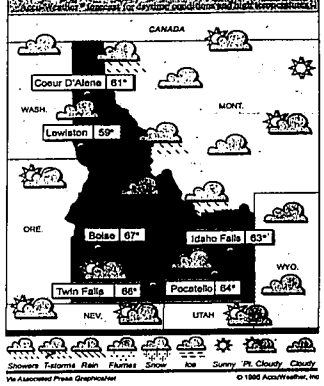

She only recently had become a drug informant for local law enforcement because she was trying to kick her addiction to "crank," he said.

During police questioning, McRoberts admitted confronting the informant with the shotgun, but said the injection was only to "get her high," Chatterton said. Miller admitted carrying the shotgun into McRoberts' home, while Hathaway denied any criminal involvement, Chatterton said. McRoberts had previously spent eight years in prison for armed robbery, Chatterton said.

Fall rains soak Northwest, Southeast, Soonerland

The Associated Press

Rain fell across the southern Atlantic states Wednesday while another band of showers spread across parts of Washington and Oregon.

Oklahoma also reported thunderstorms and some heavy rain, but the rest of the central and eastern regions of the nation were under clear skies after some early morning fog.

Tropical Storm Noel was swirling in the Atlantic Ocean, but was not expected to hit land. The 14th storm of the year, Noel marks only the second time the hurricane season has reached the letter "N" in the 45 years that forecasters have given names to Atlantic storms.

Scattered showers were reported from North Carolina to northern Florida and the central Gulf Coast. Up to one-half inch of rain fell on the North Carolina coast at Fort Bragg.

Rain also stretched from south-central Oklahoma into Texas. Oklahoma City received .75 inch of rain within an hour and a total of 1.34 inches for the day.

In the West, another weak storm pushed across western Washington and Oregon early Wednesday. By afternoon, more than an inch of rain had fallen in the previous 24 hours in Newport, Ore., and .50 to .75 inch was reported in the Oregon cities of Salem, Brookings, Astoria and Corvallis.

Showers were spreading east of the Cascades and were forecast to increase across northern Idaho and into the northern Rockies.

Today's weather fact

Anticyclones are commonly referred to as high pressure systems. In the summer, they typically bring hot, dry, hazy weather. During the winter, one can turn the weather bitterly cold. These high pressure systems creating sinking air. When the air sinks, it warms up, evaporating clouds and drying the sky. Anticyclones usually move slowly and bring no wind or rain. In the fall, they can bring the growing season to an end in one night. Cloudless skies created from these systems allow heat from the day to escape quickly, dropping temperatures into the danger zone.

Farm

But the resistance came from Reps. Bill Emerson, R-Mo., Larry Combest, R-Texas, Saxby Chambliss, R-Ga., and Richard Baker, R-La.

All four come from states that grow cotton, a crop that depends heavily on an elaborate system of loans, subsidies and production controls. The four said their opposition extended beyond cotton. Their votes, combined with the opposition of all 22 Democrats, defeated the measure last Wednesday.

Emerson and Combest had proposed an alternative that would have preserved basic programs but made fewer acres eligible for subsidies.

Negotiations went nowhere, Chambliss said, because Roberts made it clear he would go to the Budget Committee if the dissident Republicans didn't yield.

"We had no pressure to settle because we knew that's what was going to happen," Chambliss said.

Despite the setback, Roberts said his proposal will win because of the leadership's support, including that of Budget Chairman John Kasich, R-Ohio.

"I fully expect the final product to be the Freedom to Farm Act," he told reporters.

The Senate Agriculture Committee, meanwhile, quit work Wednesday after a fight over how the government protects sugar and peanut producers. Demanding more change than seemed likely, Sen. Rick Santorum, R-Pa., sided with the committee's eight Democrats to halt further work on the bill.

'I'll be playing a leading role.'

— Rep. Pat Roberts, House ag chairman

"I thought we needed to have equitable reform across the board, and peanuts and sugar are taking a walk," he said.

Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, said he wanted to extend protections for the beet sugar growers in his state beyond 1997, when the sugar program expires.

"I've got 600,000 acres and a very large work force in Idaho and a very large hunk of Idaho farmers that are involved in this commodity," he said, saying the farm bill needs to ease growers to a freer market.

The measure before the Senate committee offers a more modest attempt at change than Roberts tried to push. Saving $13.6 billion — slightly more than the $13.4 billion requested from budget writers — it would double to 30 percent the number of corn, cotton, rice and wheat acres excluded from subsidy payments. It would cap spending for subsidies.

Corn and wheat growers would be free to switch crops without losing government payments. Cotton and rice growers would maintain restrictions on acres that could enter and leave the program.

The bill would end the government's ability to force growers to idle their acres, controlling both surpluses and government spending.

The Senate version would gradually remove price supports for dairy, but would also cancel the fee that dairy farmers pay for their program. The Roberts bill would go further and end the system of minimum pricing and other regulation for dairy.

Democrats on the House and Senate Agriculture committees have protested the 17 percent in cuts and said they'll work on a farm bill after President Clinton's certain veto of the Republicans' budget-balancing legislation.

Roberts' bill acquired new life in the Senate, meanwhile. Rep. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, offered a version on the Senate floor that embraces the Roberts changes but calls for just $10 billion in savings.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. and a member of the Agriculture Committee, indicated he might offer the Roberts proposal as an amendment to the bill before the committee.

Powell will run as Republican

Chicago Tribune

Powell

CHICAGO — The leader of a movement encouraging retired Gen. Colin Powell to run for president predicted Wednesday that Powell will heed the call and run as a Republican, rejecting Ross Perot's invitation to consider a third-party candidacy.

Charles J. Kelly, director of the Washington-based Citizens for Colin Powell, said it was "a foregone conclusion" that Powell would run for president, with a formal declaration to come after his book tour ends in late October.

While Powell in recent weeks has indicated his preference for the GOP, he has been careful not to seem partisan and has left the door open to an independent presidential campaign.

But Kelly, in Chicago as part of a Midwest fundraising and organizational swing, said Powell would run as a Republican because he was aligned with the party philosophically and because it was possible for him to win the nomination. Powell will not run as an independent, Kelly said.

"Colin Powell is not glandularly driven to seek a title," Kelly said of the former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. "He'll run for president in order to make a difference for this country."

To do that, you need a decisive mandate from the voters, and you don't get a decisive mandate by dividing the country in thirds," Kelly said.

President Clinton was elected in 1992 with 43 percent of the popular vote over Republican incumbent George Bush, with independent Texas billionaire Perot receiving 19 percent.

In 1993, Perot established the grassroots activist organization United We Stand America. On Monday he announced the formation of the Independence Party for next year's presidential campaign.

Powell is barnstorming the nation to promote his autobiography, "My American Journey," and Kelly said the retired general's standing with voters has risen steadily.

While work took much of his time, his two children were his proudest legacy. John Roper sang with them in church choirs, and despite an aversion to physical activity, he took them on hikes and downhill skiing trips.

"He felt it was good for his children," Ater said. Both Ater and her brother, John Jr., went on to graduate from Harvard University.

Roper was interested in Western progress, and would take his family on road trips in the family Chevrolet to hydroelectric dams, which his wife would jokingly complain about. Sometimes she had to wear a dust mask while the family traveled on the bumpy, then-unpaved highways, Ater said.

Roper also enjoyed playing golf – except that he was always so rushed that he would go to the golf course on a Sunday when no one else was there so that he could play quickly, said longtime friend, John Rosholt, a local attorney.

"He didn't amble down the street, he hurried down the street, that was just in his nature," Rosholt said.

Roper served as president of the Idaho Retailers Association, the Twin Falls Rotary, the United Way of Magic Valley and Twin Falls Futures Inc., a group of downtown business interests.

He served as vice president of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, vice president of the Snake River Council of the Boy Scouts, and was a board member of the Menswear Retailers of America. His awards include Idaho Retailer of the Decade from 1980 to 1990 and the 1985 Twin Falls Chamber Person of the Year. He was a longtime member of the Twin Falls United Methodist Church.

"He's probably looking forward to a little rest, he has been going nonstop for so long," Rosholt said.

"O.J. Simpson is a murderer," Darden said bluntly. "You have to look at all the evidence. ... You'll see that he did it and we proved it. We proved it beyond a reasonable doubt."

Darden, who was the second prosecutor to speak before the defense took over, focused on the violence that erupted periodically during the Simpsons' relationship.

Often speaking so quietly he could barely be heard, Darden described Simpson as a man with a "short fuse" that burned every day toward the climactic moment when he took up a knife and released his rage.

"I'm not suggesting he was consumed with jealousy every minute of every day," Darden said. "I'm sure they had good times. ... But always beneath the surface was this jealousy. There's certain things that set him off, that set that fuse burning."

on another occasion when she was with a different man. In a calm voice, Ms. Simpson tried to quiet her husband because their two small children were in the house.

New $100 bill sports bigger Ben

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ben Franklin is bigger, slightly left of center and maybe even looks a little more youthful on the new $100 bill.

The new-look founding father was on display Wednesday as the government took the wraps off its new bill to launch the first overhaul of U.S. currency in nearly 70 years.

The goal is to thwart increasingly sophisticated counterfeiters worldwide — not to improve aesthetics, officials said.

"We must stay ahead of the rush of technology," said Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin. Modern computers and color scanners could pose a threat to the greenback if the United States failed to act, he said.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, on hand for an elaborate unveiling ceremony by the Clinton administration in the Treasury Department's ornate Cash Room, said there is little cause for concern. Fewer than one of every 100,000 bills of all denominations in circulation is found to be counterfeit, he said. The Fed distributes currency through its regional banks.

The government is concerned mainly with forgers overseas, where about two-thirds of the $390 billion in U.S. paper money is in circulation. Greenbacks account for about one-fifth of the world's currency supply.

Under tight secrecy, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing has been producing the new $100 bills for 10 days. It will be early next year before the general public can get its hands on them.

And it may be the turn of the century before all the smaller denominations — right down to George Washington on the $1 bill — are remodeled.

The portrait of Franklin, a pioneer in cash printing for paper currency, is 50 percent larger than on existing bills and extends from upper to lower border.

His likeness has been moved left of center to protect against wear and tear when the bills are folded and to make room for a watermark portrait of Franklin that is visible when bills are held up to the light.

Franklin also appears a bit younger, but officials said only because his hair looks darker for reasons of contrast. The engraving is from a painting that the National Portrait Gallery said probably was completed in 1785, five years before the statesman-inventor died.

Of the numerous security features in the new bills, some are hidden while others change the appearance of the notes dramatically.

Some traditional identifying marks help retain the distinct look and feel of U.S. currency in both the $100 bills and the plans for other denominations. The size is unchanged. They still say, "In God We Trust." And the colors are the same, black on the front, green on the back.

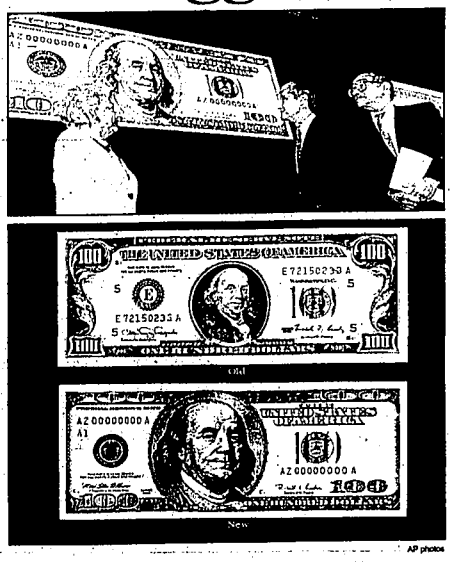

One hard-to-see change will be that the vertical security threads, introduced in 1990, will be placed in different positions, depending on the denomination.

Officials stressed that no currency will be recalled and all bills in circulation remain legal tender. They predicted it will take years until all old bills are out of circulation.

Critics said failure to recall the old bills could blunt the anti-counterfeiting drive. Forgers can duplicate the traditional notes as long as they are around, they said.

But the administration has said recalling old bills could destabilize the economies of foreign nations, particularly in Russia where greenbacks are hoarded as a hedge against inflation.

The last major change in U.S. currency was in 1929, when bills were reduced in size and given a uniform look. There were some small changes in 1990, including the first use of microscopic type.

3rd parties often make difference

And now Ross Perot is ready to march into history with the Anti-Masons, Free-Soilers, Know-Nothings, Greenbacks, Populists, Socialists, Communists, States Righters, Libertarians, and the rest of the 200 "third parties" that have looked at the Republicans and Democrats and offered a pox on both their houses.

Not since Abraham Lincoln and the GOP replaced a Whig Party disintegrating over the question of slavery has a new party made it to the White House, although some of them have made a difference in trying. Only six have even won more than a million votes, and none has carried a single state since 1968.

What Perot is talking about doing in 1996 is far more ambitious than what he did in 1992, when he won 19 million votes at a cost of about $64 million from his own wallet.

That time he ran as an independent. This time he wants to start a new Independence Party, its candidate still to be determined.

But Perot is foregoing building a party that would run candidates for offices at all levels, at least for now. That dismays political scientists, who for years have drummed into students' heads that there's nothing sacred about the two-party system.

Theodore Lowi of Cornell, former president of the American Political Science Association and long an advocate of new parties, said a lone-ranger president would be unable to get much done without his own loyalists in Congress.

"It can't be a single bullet presidency," Lowi said. "Even if they happen to win, they've got nobody to govern with. Even Ross Perot couldn't handle that. He'd be likely to resign after three months."

But running thousands of candidates would be formidable. It would require the petition signatures of 1.65 million Americans, says Richard Winger of Ballot Access News in San Francisco. Walter Dean Burnham of the University of Texas guesses it would cost half a billion dollars or more.

Laws, which vary from state to state and change from year to year, make it tough.

"It's a massively complicated machine whose function is to try to keep third-party candidates and parties off the ballot," says Bill Winter of the Libertarian Party. His party's 291,627 votes in 1992 make it the nation's biggest continuous third party.

Hillary Clinton blasts GOP Medicaid plan

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — After months out of the health care spotlight, Hillary Rodham Clinton returned Wednesday, criticizing GOP-backed Medicaid changes as unnecessarily cruel to children who are sick but poor.

In a speech before children's hospital officials, the first lady said $182 billion in proposed Medicaid savings would undercut the care they provide, since Medicaid accounts for nearly 80 cents of every dollar spent on a sick child.

"It is a lifeline, literally, for millions of children and families," she said. "Ripping apart this lifeline is not the American way."

The Republican-led Congress is dismantling Medicaid "at breakneck pace" to pay for a $245 billion tax break, Mrs. Clinton said, with little discussion of the consequences. The debate, she said, is about statistics, position papers and crunched numbers when it should dwell on "our core values as Americans."

"Today, we are losing a sense of ourselves as an American family," she said. "We are allowing ourselves to be torn apart, divided, put in competition with each other over resources."

Republicans who support the changes did not immediately return calls seeking comment.

Mrs. Clinton had a highly public role as one of President Clinton's main advisers until last year, when the health reform campaign she spearheaded failed in Congress. While she remains a key influence, she has focused publicly on issues typically handled by first ladies and returned to her longtime advocacy for women and children.

Wednesday's audience, doctors and benefactors from 19 children's hospitals nationwide, gathered at the National Institutes of Health for a conference by the Children's Circle of Care, which raises money for pediatric care and research. Mrs. Clinton is an honorary chair.

The group hopes to double the number of donors who give more than $10,000 to children's hospitals. Regardless of whether they achieve that goal, Mrs. Clinton said, the federal government should not scale back its commitment to Medicaid.

The program, according to the Department of Health and Human Services, provides health care benefits to one-fourth of all U.S. children, two-thirds of those under age 3 and nine of every 10 children with HIV or AIDS, as well as two-thirds of all nursing home residents.

"There is no way that private philanthropy can pick up this enormous gap," Mrs. Clinton said.

She challenged lawmakers to approach Medicaid reform as parents, not as politicians wrapped up in statistics and policy.

"Would we ever say as parents that only one out of four of our own children could go to the doctor?" Mrs. Clinton said. "But suddenly, when it comes time to legislate and make policy, good parental instincts retreat."

McVeigh's lawyer seeks time on site decision

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Arguing that they need time to poll potential jurors, lawyers for bombing suspect Timothy McVeigh asked a court for another month to decide whether to challenge the trial site.

U.S. District Judge Wayne Alley has set a May 17 trial in Lawton, about 90 miles from Oklahoma City.

Lawyers for McVeigh and co-defendant Terry Nichols have argued that their clients could not get a fair trial anywhere in Oklahoma. McVeigh's lawyer, Stephen Jones, however, has recently softened his position on Lawton.

Clinton, Yeltsin set meeting next month

WASHINGTON — President Clinton and Russian President Boris Yeltsin have agreed to hold an abbreviated summit meeting Oct. 23 in Hyde Park N.Y., the White House announced Wednesday.

Clinton and Yeltsin spoke for 20 minutes, discussing the upcoming meeting — to be held in conjunction with a United Nations session in New York — and recent peace developments in Bosnia, said White House spokesman Mike McCurry.

"The president underscored ... the importance the United States attaches to continued close cooperation with Russia" as the peace process moves forward in the former Yugoslavia.

The two presidents discussed Tuesday's agreement in New York by Bosnia's factions on a formula for sharing power once the four-year war ends.

Chief justice undergoes back surgery

WASHINGTON — Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist underwent back surgery Wednesday and could miss Monday's start of the 1995-96 Supreme Court term.

Court spokeswoman Kathy Arberg said Rehnquist was resting comfortably in Washington Hospital Center after an operation to relieve compression of the spinal cord. The operation is called a laminectomy for spinal stenosis.

Rehnquist, who has suffered from back pain since an accident while playing table tennis in the 1970s, had returned from his Vermont vacation home about three weeks ago.

The chief justice did not preside at Tuesday's closed-door court conference, but there was no indication he missed voting on the nine cases granted review in orders released Wednesday.

City: 'Showgirls' violates ordinance

GRANTS PASS, Ore. — A theater owner promised to send "Showgirls" packing today after the city accused him of violating an ordinance regulating adult entertainment.

The decision by theater owner John Schweiger came as theater operators in Mississippi decided to stop showing the NC-17-rated film in Hattiesburg, Flowood and Ridgeland in response to community complaints.

"I think people are expressing relative to this picture, a deep, genuine concern for their community," said John Neal, a spokesman for United Artists Theatre Circuit of Denver.

In Grants Pass, City Attorney Ulys Stapleton sent a letter to Schweiger saying the theater was violating an ordinance that regulates businesses based on the age of patrons. The measure was adopted to keep adult businesses from residential areas.

Pentagon: Affair cost general his job

PHOENIX — An extramarital affair with a civilian cost an Air Force general his career because military men and women "are held to a higher standard," a Pentagon spokesman says.

A report released Tuesday confirmed that then-Lt. Gen. Thomas R. Griffith was demoted for having the affair with a woman he met at an Air Force conference in Virginia.

Griffith was relieved June 26 as commander of the 12th Air Force and U.S. Southern Command Air Forces, where he oversaw 530 planes and 43,000 service men and woman. He has since retired, at the request of his superiors.

Report: Door latch standard saves lives

WASHINGTON — The government's highway safety agency, concerned about passengers being ejected through vehicles' rear doors, issued the first-ever safety standard for rear-door latches.

The lock and retention standard for side-door latches is being extended to the rear doors of all passenger vans including minivans, hatchbacks, station wagons and sports utility vehicles starting with model year 1998, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said Wednesday.

"Minivans and other vehicles with hatchbacks are the station wagons of the '90s, the most popular form of family transportation," said Richard Martinez, who heads NHTSA. "The back door, although used primarily for loading cargo, should meet the same standards as other doors."

High court will review waste cleanup law

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court Wednesday agreed to decide whether a federal environmental law lets people sue to recover the cost of cleaning up hazardous waste on their property.

The court said it will hear two former California property owners' argument that the federal Resource Conservation and Recovery Act does not allow such lawsuits.

Alan and Margaret Meghrig, who are brother and sister, sold a lot in Los Angeles in 1975 to KFC Western, which operates a Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant on the property.

The Meghrigs had owned the lot for 12 years. Previous owners had operated gasoline stations on the property for decades. KFC discovered gasoline contamination at the site in 1988 and spent more than $211,000 in the next year to remove the contaminated soil.

Administration OKs FAA reform plan

WASHINGTON — A Senate bill to overhaul the nation's air traffic control system got the administration's blessing Wednesday, but industry representatives objected to plans for user fees for aviation services.

The legislation, said Transportation Secretary Federico Pena, "is an excellent start" toward giving the Federal Aviation Administration the freedom it needs to update its technology, use its personnel more efficiently and obtain financial security.

Pena was testifying to the Senate subcommittee on aviation chaired by Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., who wrote the bill with Sens. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., and Ernest Hollings, D-S.C.

McCain's bill, unlike a competing bill in the House that would make the FAA an independent government agency, would keep the FAA within the Transportation Department but give the agency greater authority to make its own personnel and buying decisions.

Rape spurs U.S. to tighten base security

Perry

NEW YORK (AP) — In an effort to calm Japanese outrage over the gang rape of a 12-year-old girl on Okinawa, Defense Secretary William Perry announced Wednesday a series of steps ranging from a "day of reflection" to increased security patrols on the island.

Perry outlined the measures at a ceremony signing a new security agreement under which Japan will increase to $5 billion a year its payment toward the cost of stationing 40,000 U.S. troops on its territory.

Japan has been paying $4.8 billion a year, which is about 70 percent of the cost.

After signing the agreement, Secretary of State Warren Christopher said it would make "a very strong alliance — even stronger" and went on to say he was "deeply distressed ... over the tragic incident in Okinawa."

"We sincerely regret that this very unfortunate incident in Okinawa took place," said Foreign Minister Yohei Kono, who signed the agreement for Japan.

While voicing appreciation for the steps the United State was taking to improve discipline, Kono also made it clear Japan wanted changes in the way criminal cases involving U.S. troops are handled.

Three U.S. servicemen were arrested by military police and are being held pending possible indictment by Japanese authorities. Only then will they be turned over to the Japanese for trial.

If they had been arrested by the Japanese police, they would have remained in the custody of that country.

The signing took place after a meeting between Christopher and Perry and their Japanese counterparts, the first time all four had met together to discuss U.S.-Japanese security relations.

"When any of our military personnel violates the hospitality of the host country, it is not only an action for which that person must be held individually responsible, but it also reflects on the United States," said Perry.

He said that the Marines on Okinawa would suspend normal training for "a day of reflection" and that religious services this weekend would focus on that reflection.

In addition, he said senior officers and enlisted personnel would participate in a session on how to increase discipline. He said coordination would be improved between the military and the civilian authorities on Okinawa.

He announced an increase in security patrols and said rules for consumption of alcoholic beverages would be tightened.

4 charged in toddler's death

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A fourth alleged gang member was charged Wednesday with shooting a 3-year-old girl to death as she rode in a car that took a wrong turn down a dead-end street.

The 16-year-old youth, who wasn't identified because of his age, was charged with murder and five counts of attempted murder, the same charges filed Tuesday against two adults and another 16-year-old.

Marcos Antonio Luna, 23, and Marvin Alejandro Pech, 18, had bail set at $3.5 million each. If convicted, they each face 15 years to life in prison.

Police were still searching for other suspects.

Stephanie Kuhen was killed Sept. 17 when the driver of a car she was riding in mistakenly turned down a gangland street on the way home from a barbecue. Her 2-year-old brother was shot in the foot and the driver suffered a minor back wound.

Medicaid reform bill would end federal nursing-home safeguards

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — The GOP Medicaid reform bill moving through Congress would repeal federal standards that protect nursing-home patients from abuse, as well as economic safeguards that shield families from staggering nursing-home bills.

Republicans say their bill would require states to have their own nursing-home quality standards, under strict yet less bureaucratic federal guidelines. As for the economic safeguards, Republicans are also directing states to establish their own protections.

But nursing-home watchdog groups, relatives of nursing-home residents, and academic researchers say GOP lawmakers are making a costly mistake by throwing out standards that took years to put in place, and are now paying off with measurable improvements in quality.

Advocates for the elderly also say there's no guarantee that states will retain economic safeguards for the spouses and families of nursing-home residents, especially if state budgets get squeezed by rising health costs.

A 1988 federal law — now subject to repeal — allows nursing-home residents to qualify for Medicaid while their spouses keep the family home, certain assets, and a share of income. Prior to the law, stories of longtime married couples divorcing to avoid impoverishment were not unheard of.

Millions of families could be affected by the changes in nursing-home laws. There are now more than 1.5 million nursing-home residents, a figure that's expected to grow in coming years. Medicaid pays the bills for about 70 percent of nursing-home patients, about $57 billion a year.

For now, the repeal of federal nursing-home standards seems to be stirring the most controversy. Republicans say the criticism is misguided.

"We're not going back to the bad old world," said a senior House GOP aide. "We're just trying to get away from a highly prescriptive baloney system that's costing states millions that could be spent on people instead."

But quality of care continues to be a major concern for families of nursing-home residents.

"It does no good to be fiscally conservative and open the gate to hurting nursing-home residents," said Kathy Gannoe, who works for the non-profit Nursing Home Ombudsman Agency in Lexington, Ky.

Gannoe, who helps families and nursing homes work together to resolve complaints, said she believes based on her experience that state standards would not be as strict. "We wouldn't have had federal standards if states had done their job," she said.

The federal standards, passed in 1987, sharply restrict the use of physical restraints and sedatives to control patients, set staffing and training requirements for nursing homes, establish a patient bill of rights, and require nursing homes to develop individual care plans to improve or maintain the abilities of each patient.

The standards were created in response to a landmark 1986 study by the National Academy of Sciences' Institute of Medicine, which found widespread abuses and quality problems in nursing homes. Aside from quality problems, there's another argument for uniform national standards: people move, and having the same rules in every states makes it easier on families.

"I cannot believe that they are proposing to do this," said Charlene Herrington, a member of the panel that produced the 1986 study. Herrington is a department chair in the school of nursing at the University of California in San Francisco.

"I don't know if they really understand what they're doing," she added. "Nursing-home quality has always been a problem, and it's only recently it's starting to improve."

Charles Phillips, a gerontologist at the Research Triangle Institute in North Carolina, said evidence from his survey of 250 nursing homes shows the standards have improved quality, and may even be saving the government money.

Phillips' survey compared nursing homes in 1990 and 1993 and found that:

- Use of restraints and sedatives was down by 25 percent overall, and had been reduced by half for patients who were not mentally impaired.
- The rate of hospitalization for nursing-home residents was down 25 percent. Fewer hospital admissions translate into savings for Medicare.
- Sixty-eight percent of nursing-home administrators considered individual patient assessments required by the standards an excessive paperwork burden, but 64 percent said it was worth the time and effort.

"This is a system that was put in place in response to a problem, and the best evidence we have at this point indicates that it has helped," said Phillips.

David Kyllo, a Washington spokesman for the nursing-home trade association, said the industry group had not pushed for repeal of the standards.

"These are the only regulations that protect my son," said Don Weiss, an engineer from Maryland's Washington suburbs. "What's going to happen is that nursing homes won't be bound by any rules, and therefore when the cat's away, the mice will play."

Peter, his 35-year-old son, is in a nursing home because of disabling complications from leukemia treatments. The Weisses say it's been a struggle to get nursing homes to abide by the rules that are on the books now.

Jennifer Means, a legal assistant from Stanton, Ky., wonders what will happen to her mother, Annette McIntosh, who's been in a nursing home for two years because of Huntington's chorea, a rare genetic disease of the nervous system.

A nursing home tried to discharge her mother, when no other facility in Kentucky would take her. But Means was able to use the federal standards to get the facility to reconsider, and her mother is doing better.

"I think federal laws are more effective than state laws," Means said. "I would be constantly worried about Mom getting the proper care."

Republicans are somewhat taken aback by the controversy over the quality standards. Aides say the regulations run to 927 pages of bureaucratic language and are costing the states millions of dollars to enforce. They say the governors asked for the repeal of the rules.

"This bill does not say that the federal government has no role in standards," explained Rep. Cliff Stearns, R-Fla., a member of the committee that oversees Medicaid. "We require the state governments to come up with standards."

However, Stearns said he is watching the reaction carefully. "Particularly in my state," said Stearns, "I'm not going to let this thing go without being sure."

Judge up in arms because of female lawyer's pants

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A judge refused to let a female lawyer enter a plea for her client because she was wearing pants.

"If a man were to come to court without a tie, I'd ask him to put on a tie," Circuit Judge Joseph Wilson said after calling off Monday's hearing.

Heather Smith's client, who faces firearms charges, will have to enter her plea at a later date. Ms. Smith declined to comment Tuesday.

Her colleagues were surprised by the judge's move.

"I've seen plenty of women in courtrooms across the state wearing pantsuits," said Sue C. Erwin, president of the South Carolina Women's Lawyers Association.

Study links chronic fatigue to blood pressure disorder

CHICAGO (AP) — Chronic fatigue syndrome was linked to an abnormality in the body's mechanism for regulating blood pressure in a study that suggests drug treatment and a high-salt diet may combat the debilitating illness.

The study of 23 adults reported in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association expanded on earlier research by doctors at Johns Hopkins University. The earlier study found the similar results with teen-agers who suffer from the disorder.

In the study of adults with chronic fatigue syndrome, all but one were found to have a disorder in regulating blood pressure, called neurally mediated hypotension.

Nine of them reported an end to their fatigue after taking drugs to boost the amount of blood in their bodies and eating a high-salt diet for about six months. Seven others said they felt their symptoms improve, researchers said.

"Here for the first time is a treatment that makes a significant proportion of the patients feel better," said Dr. Hugh Calkins, one of four physicians at Johns Hopkins University who authored the study.

However, he cautioned that more research is necessary to determine whether chronic fatigue can actually be cured by taking the drugs. The patients involved with the study are still being treated, he said.

When the results of the study on seven teen-agers was announced last March, doctors in Europe said it merely confirmed what had been known for years.

"This may be new to the people in America, but it's not new to us," Dr. Peter Behan, a professor of neurology at the University of Glasgow, said in a March interview. "I'm delighted to draw attention to this syndrome but unfortunately it does not further our knowledge very much."

Chronic fatigue syndrome, first dubbed the "yuppie flu," was recognized as a disease in 1988, but the causes have been unclear and no drug treatment has been effective. Some doctors have suggested the Epstein-Barr virus is responsible; others say it is actually severe depression, which has similar symptoms.

Lawmakers unlikely to bar U.S. troops from Bosnia service

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Despite the clamor in Congress against President Clinton's plan to use U.S. troops to enforce a peace accord in Bosnia, congressional strategists said lawmakers are unlikely to try to stop him.

Clinton reiterated his determination Tuesday, telling reporters that no matter how some lawmakers may feel, the United States "is the leader of NATO, no peace agreement could be fairly implemented without the involvement of NATO and we cannot walk away from our responsibility to try to end this terrible conflict. ..."

Clinton's remarks brushed aside protests by key lawmakers — most recently Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. — that the administration has not been "consulting" Capitol Hill on the issue and demanding more details about what a deployment would include.

A few hours before Clinton spoke, White House press secretary Mike McCurry publicly rejected the lawmakers' objections, arguing that the administration had been in almost "constant" contact with Congress. "I don't know what they're talking about," he said.

The issue has been heating up over the last several days as lawmakers from both parties have scrambled to put their skepticism about U.S. military intervention in Bosnia — and in some cases their outright opposition to it — on the public record.

Even Rep. Lee H. Hamilton, D-Ind., ranking Democrat on the House International Relations Committee and a frequent ally of the president, joined the chorus Tuesday. "I think the president is going to have a pretty heavy burden of persuasion," he told Fox Morning News.

But congressional strategists said that, despite threats from some lawmakers, neither house is likely to pass a resolution that either prevents Clinton from sending U.S. soldiers to help NATO forces or restricts the total number of U.S. ground troops that can be deployed.

Rather, they said, what the lawmakers are trying to do is raise enough warning flags now so that they can cover themselves politically and later distance themselves from the administration if the military venture backfires and U.S. soldiers are killed.

That assessment is shared by senior Clinton advisers. "Our own thinking is that when all is said and done, (Congress) will not try to block the deployment of U.S. troops as part of a NATO-led peacekeeping force," said one key official familiar with lawmakers' views.

Although the administration has committed itself to sending as many as 25,000 U.S. ground troops to bolster NATO forces if a peace accord is signed, the Pentagon says it will not be able to determine the size and makeup of such a contingent until the terms of the pact are firm.

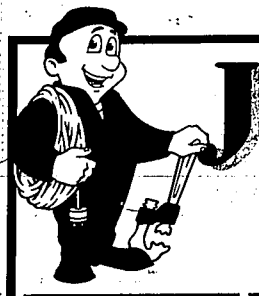

Allied military planners have begun devising options to consider once a peace agreement has been negotiated. Although some say that the operation now could get by with as few as 8,000 U.S. troops, the Pentagon wants to send the full 25,000 to provide U.S. soldiers with more protection.

Defense Secretary William J. Perry told reporters Tuesday that while planning still is incomplete, intentions are for the U.S. force — along with as many as 25,000 additional ground troops from other NATO countries — to remain in Bosnia for up to a year.

Most of the lawmakers who have been questioning the proposed deployment have carefully limited their demands to insisting that Clinton "consult" more with Congress.

What lawmakers want most is for the administration to develop a military plan for the operation and begin briefing members of Congress so that lawmakers can satisfy themselves that the venture is viable and feel comfortable in reassuring their constituents.

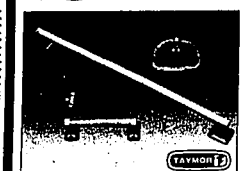

McCurry said Tuesday the president "is looking for an opportunity to do that at an early moment," but the Pentagon said the military planning will not be completed for weeks.

Opinion

Editorial

Community should join in discussion of hospital

Once again, Larry Braga is asking uncomfortable questions about Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. They are good questions, as far as they go. In our view, however, public discussion about the county hospital's future ought to be even broader and more searching.

As an accountant, Braga brings a valuable perspective to his membership on the county's hospital board. It was Braga who publicly raised the possibility of selling the hospital to private investors a few months ago. Now Braga is voicing the only dissent against the board's plan to build an $8 million office building. It's a bad investment for county taxpayers, Braga argues.

We're not sure whether or not he's right on this issue. Either way, the community is fortunate to have someone as independently minded as Braga on the board. The rapidly changing health-care market is putting the hospital's future in question, and public debate about the institution's plans is a good thing. More of it would be even better.

The hospital's leadership has dithered for more than a year about how to cash in on the national trend toward managed health care. Meanwhile, more nimble competitors are leaping into the field, and the local medical market is becoming increasingly complex and competitive.

The hospital is an enormous financial asset to Twin Falls County's taxpayers, who own it. It also is an invaluable medical asset to the multicounty area it serves. The community needs to be concerned about protecting its investment in the cutthroat business environment that is evolving in the health-care industry – not to mention protecting our continuing access to the top-notch medical facilities the hospital houses.

We're not predicting the hospital's demise. Far from it. Magic Valley Regional is still the biggest player in the local market. It's still a well-run hospital that the community can be proud of.

But an old-style, all-purpose regional medical center will face tough competition in years to come. How will Magic Valley Regional keep itself financially strong while serving the public's needs?

We think the hospital board and its bosses, the Twin Falls County commissioners, ought to open a broad-based, community dialogue on that subject. Meanwhile, Braga ought to keep asking those uncomfortable questions.

Do run, run

The filing period opens today for city council seats in towns throughout the Magic Valley.

How about you?

Membership on a city council isn't glamorous. In fact, it's often a huge source of frustration. But the willingness of ordinary people to serve in these jobs is a key element in keeping democracy going. It's one of the best ways to contribute to a community's future.

How about you?

Powell: Not just another politician

Molly Ivins

In one of those breathtaking moments in the history of punditry, all the regulars on David Brinkley's program on Sunday agreed: Claiming that the $270 billion Medicare cut is paying for $245 billion in tax cuts for the rich just won't fly. I always enjoy seeing millionaires in agreement on points like this.

The media, having created the Colin Powell Bubble, are now having a wonderful time bouncing it around. Recall, if you will, the heady spring of 1992, when all the polls showed that the leading contender for the presidency was H. Ross Perot, who at that point had made six appearances on national television.

I don't mean to rain on Powell's parade: I'd love it if he got in this race. I'm also rooting for Jesse Jackson, Ross Perot, Bill Bradley, Jerry Brown and any other likely suspect to join in. My working motto is: "It is an honor to witness so much confusion."

But possible presidential candidates have the most unfortunate habit of becoming less attractive the minute that they admit they want the office. It's our fault, of course, perverse creatures that we are. The minute some poor patriot announces, we promptly sneer, "Oh, he's just another politician." He takes a stand, and we see it as "pandering" to the right or the left or the middle. Or we notice that he doesn't know what he's talking about. Or we pounce upon some slip of the tongue as evidence proving that the fellow is a lint-head.

One dangerous consequence of the Powell Bubble is already in evidence. With the smug self-complacency of the truly ignorant, some of the right-wing brethren are claiming that Powell's popularity "proves" either (A) how far we have come on race in this country or (B) that race in this country is no longer an issue.

Oh. Dear. I hate to point out the obvious again, but Powell is not a very black man. I speak only of hue; he is what is known in some circles as a light'n'bright. As any black person and all of black literature can tell you, shades of skin color still make an enormous amount of difference in this country. To your serious racist, of course, all black people are black, skin tone not withstanding. But the extent to which whiter shades of pale still make a difference is heartbreakingly clear to anyone who looks honestly.

Ever optimistic to the point of idiocy, I harbor hopes that a Powell candidacy will provide us with an opportunity for a thorough airing of race in America. I have enough confidence in American racism to be sure that Powell, at one or more points in his life, has been made to feel like dirt despite his brains, courage, honor, decency, credentials, degrees, medals and accomplishments. If he can describe to us exactly what that feels like, it would do us a power of good.

Speaking as one of the most melanin-deprived persons around (some of us don't even tan), I am not about to touch the question of Powell's cultural blackness. T'ain't my place. But it will come up. It's an unfair burden on his candidacy, but it will be there.

I was amused to read recently that the Young Republicans of Texas A&M University have got their knickers in a twist over the dread possibility of having multiculturalism introduced into their academic world. I wonder what it is they are afraid of learning.

That Wounded Knee was not a great victory? That George Armstrong Custer was a jackass? That Crazy Horse was only 35 when he was shot in the back while trying to surrender? Are they afraid that they cannot know such things and still love their country?

Imagine President Powell, with his well-known interest in the Buffalo Soldiers, coming to speak at A&M and having to explain who the Buffalo Soldiers were.

Setting aside such happy fantasies, the more pertinent question about a possible Powell candidacy is the politician problem. I know, I know – we are all sick to death of politicians, the very word is an insult, anyone who is not a politician has a leg up, and we'd all rather vote for our dentists, thank you. But it is still useful in politics to have political skills: persuasion, consensus building (aka straddling) and even the dread compromise, that most loathed and most necessary of all political skills.

And the people least likely to have political skills are those from the top of the corporate world, who can fire subordinates, and from the top of the military world, who can have subordinates thrown in the brig.

As many a baffled governor from Big Business has learned, you cannot fire the Legislature.

Letters

Man apologizes, clarifies points

I need to issue a couple of apologies and clarify a few things from a letter I wrote that appeared on Aug. 29.

First of all, I apologize to the residents of Laura Circle who have had nothing to do with the neighborhood association (boy, there's a misnomer) in its dispute with Golden Bennett.

Second, in my initial letter, I made a comment about the Horizon Estates covenants being dissolved years ago that may have been a mistake on my part. However, that point is moot as it was decided in Judge Burdick's memorandum decision that the house isn't governed by the upscale Horizon Estates covenants but rather by the Hill Tract No. 2 subdivision. It appears only the driveway will be in Horizon Estates.

In reply to Mr. Beus: I doubt very few people would be willing to sign any agreement to pay $25 a day after your allotted time frame to bring their property up to your standards, or anybody else's for that matter.

As for the rest of my letter, I firmly stand behind my comments, appalling as they may have been (?). My eyes are wide open, and I am an honest person and all those who know me know this is true. Apparently what this whole mess boils down to is that the association never intended to allow Golden to move the house into its neighborhood no matter what he said or did, and it took measures it felt necessary to accomplish this goal. In the old days, groups like yours would wait for nightfall, throw the hoods on, hop on the horses and go burn down the house in question, but I'm sure these people are much to civilized for such drastic measures. I'm sure your covenants exclude horses in the neighborhood anyway.

Finally, I need to clarify my comment about Golden soon having the nicest house on the block. Perhaps I could have found a better adjective than "nice." Still, it is obvious the above-mentioned persons were too shallow to read between the lines. The comment was humanistic in nature as in warm, friendly and welcoming. Apparently, the association took my comment to be materialistic in nature, a characteristic often associated with shallow personalities. Your letters more than confirmed my suspicions as to your attitudes and personalities. Thank you.

We could learn a lot from kids

Your Sept. 22 commentary on school prayer was well-spoken and accepted in the spirit in which it was offered.

However, please think back a few years to the first few times students began to meet the third Wednesday in September to pray together once again: "Almighty God, we ask they blessing on us, our parents, our teachers and our country." Then there was a lot of controversy.

Young people set their eyes on an eternal goal, knowing full well that some uninformed adult just might call in the police. I know, because as a mom who transported kids to Burley High School's flagpole, I heard quiet "what if's ..." coming from the back seats.

We could, indeed, learn a lot as adults from the resolve of our children. Build them up, encourage them to reach for their dreams. These "kids" are the future!

Whenever you hear someone calling from Generation X, remember that in mathematics, "X" often indicates an unknown number ... with limitless potential!

One more thing: The principal of the school my three are attending has a great license frame on the back of his car. It reads, "As long as there are tests, there will be prayer in school."

With great hope for the future,
DEBBIE BATES

Save the flag from desecration

I was glad to see you run the Sept. 20 Associated Press story regarding "Youth won't be prosecuted for wiping oil on flag." As someone very active in promoting adoption of a constitutional amendment allowing states the right to again enact legislation addressing physical desecration of the U.S. flag, this is another example of where the dregs of society display their beliefs and disrespect.

In 1989, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the 1984 Texas conviction of Gregory Johnson, an avowed member of the revolutionary communist youth who openly stated his goal was the overthrow of this nation and our form of government. Johnson and his pals ripped down an American flag from its staff, then tossed it on the ground, where they trampled upon that flag. They then sprayed it with lighter fluid, set it afire and chanted, "America, the red, white and blue – we spit on you!"

This mindset seems to set the agenda of some Magic Valley residents who tell me we don't need anything to address this issue of flag desecration. Some state we have no right to act and overturn the 1989 Supreme Court action, as if this one ruling should never be examined or addressed.

An overwhelming majority of Americans believe that this issue should be addressed, and they have affirmed for many years that Americans want a constitutional amendment adopted. This very same Supreme Court, while saying Johnson's act was viewed as his freedom of speech, stated that adoption of a constitutional amendment regarding flag desecration would solve this issue.

Last week's Oklahoma City incident brings the physical desecration of the American flag issue back into the press as the U.S. Senate gears up for its vote on this legislation. More than 110 social and veterans organizations of this nation have acknowledged support of this constitutional amendment, most recently the Boy Scouts of America.

Please let your senators know that you support SJR-31 now. Give states back their power as granted under the 10th Amendment of the Constitution.

SJR-31: "The Congress and the states shall have power to prohibit the physical desecration of the flag of the United States." Since it has already passed the U.S. House with HJR-79, it would then go to our state legislatures where 38 states would need to pass the amendment before it would become part of our American Constitution.

Trash hurts wildlife, nature

Oh, what a gorgeous day for a drive and picnic in the South Hills! The crisp air and fall colors ... maybe see a deer or two or some elusive big horn sheep. And what's that flash of silver in the creek? Maybe a school of feeding trout?

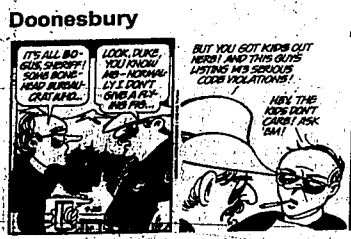

Nope – it's an aluminum can and broken glass and disposable diapers snagged on submerged logs. There's a sign as you enter the national forest on Rock Creek Road that informs us of $4,000 of our tax dollars so far this year have been spent on vandalism, theft and littering in the South Hills, and that's just picnic tables, trash down toilets and such. That doesn't even begin to touch the damage done to nature. In one campsite alone, we saw a fake tee-pee made out of live, healthy quakie saplings; batteries left in a smoldering fire and human feces and toilet paper scattered in the trees and shrubs.

To whomever did this damage: Is it so hard to take some AA batteries home to your trash can? Take a shovel next time you go and bury your feces if you are not near an available toilet. Take your trash with you – don't try to burn it in a fire pit. Take your own wood or collect dead and fallen wood; don't hack on live trees. Keep the water clean. It's not hard, and you'll feel better about yourself too. It is a life-long habit that is not hard to learn.

Most of the camping and picnic areas in the South Hills are no-fee areas. There aren't many areas like that around anymore. Let's keep it that way. Are you so obsessed with "Just Say No," "Safe Sex" and "OJ" that you've forgotten about Woodsy Owl, respect of nature and just plain ol' common courtesy?

Declaring war on pursuit of knowledge

Virginia I. Postrel

Among my husband's souvenirs from graduate school is a memo from Franco Modigliani, who has since won the Nobel Prize in economics, telling students and colleagues of a friend's murder by the Red Brigades for the crime of being an economist. It is a reminder that the contemplative life is not without its enemies or its risks.

The Unabomber's manifesto is a similar reminder. Its 35,000 words bought a place in The Washington Post with the blood of scholars.

The tract's contents are familiar: Technology is evil. Nature is good. Villages were virtuous. Cities are abominations. Life would be better without refrigeration.

Its ancestors include a long line of intellectuals, from John Ruskin to the Southern Agrarians to Jeremy Rifkin and Kirkpatrick Sale. Indeed, the manifesto's theme is so common as to be cliched – the fastest, hippest way to get published. Stasis sells. According to the jacket of his latest work, Sale can afford two homes – in Manhattan and Cold Spring, New York. He defends the bomber's "crucial message," though not his methods or his writing style. "It is a statement of a rational and serious man," Sale writes in the Nation.

It is, in fact, the statement of a monster – a murderer, yes, but more than that. A murderer for a monstrous cause.

The Unabomber is a terrorist, not "a respected environmentalist and historian" as the New Yorker magazine describes Sale. And terrorists don't have to hide their full agendas.

The Unabomber doesn't simply attack computers or telephones or even technology in general. He doesn't indulge in Utne Reader-style fantasies, dreaming of a land without malls or automobiles but with plenty of newspapers and croissants. He does not even content himself with Salesian musings on the wonders of Paleolithic life, the good old days when people died at 32.5 years old.

He attacks, in scathing terms, the very pursuit of knowledge. He is at war with science itself.

"As for 'curiosity,' that notion is simply absurd," he writes. "Most scientists work on highly specialized problems that are not the object of any normal curiosity." Pursuing answers to esoteric puzzles, such as "the properties of isopropyltrimethylmethane" or "the appropriate classification of a new species of beetle," he writes, is merely a "surrogate activity," the sort of thing people do when they need not scrape a living from the ground. Scientists, complains the bomber, "work mainly for the fulfillment they get out of the work itself" rather than to solve "real problems" such as finding their next meal.

If I were the FBI, I'd pay close attention to this passage, so different is its specificity from the vague anti-specialization sentiments found in most such tracts. The Unabomber knows exactly what he hates, what he wants to destroy. He dreams of a day when "surviving technical books would be few and scattered."

He knows – as Sale and Rifkin know, as social critics Christopher Lasch and E.F. Schumacher knew – that to be at war with modernity, at war with progress, at war with technology is not just to attack gadgets or advertising or even capitalism itself. It is to attack the life of the mind, the idea that human beings can, or should, understand the universe. It is to seek to destroy the notion that life can improve, that the tyrannies of nature can be overcome. It is to embrace the fatalism that declares disease and disaster the will of God, pain and ignorance the fate of man.

Near the end of "Rebels Against the Future," Sale suggests that "a movement of resistance" has arisen to take up a challenge from philosopher George Grant: "'The darkness which envelops the Western world because of its long dedication to the overcoming of chance' – by which he means the triumph of the scientific mind and its industrial constructs – 'is just a fact. ... The job of thought in our time is to bring into the light that darkness as darkness.'"

That is just what the Unabomber is seeking to do, to define as darkness – as evil – the human achievement that defies chance. His is the violent arm of Sale's movement of resistance.

To agree with the philosophical position of a terrorist is certainly not to endorse terrorism. To agree with the philosophical position of this particular terrorist, however, is to declare war on the hope and glory of the human race.

Rim side housing complex, golf course unnecessary

Reading the Magic Valley section of my morning copy of The Times-News on Sept. 21, I found myself sick. After scanning the stofy headlined, "Developers want site on canyon rim," I felt like purging myself right on that very article. I find it absolutely ludicrous that a housing complex, complete with an 18-hole golf course, has been proposed east of the Hansen Bridge.

The article was written with such elegance as to make it sound like someone is building a new heaven right next to the Hansen Bridge. Oh, don't forget the restaurant, complete with lounge. This complex, with its 83 shares of water rights, and the golf course will, of course, be a private community – off-limits to the spectating public.

The article stated that "The development will provide attractive housing sites overlooking the Snake River." If you ask me, any houses along our beautiful canyon rim are ugly, trashing the gorgeous scenery that developers wish to rape.

These developers colorfully laced this announcement so as if to make the public think that they are doing us a favor. They intend to use "unproductive agriculture land" for this development. What exactly to they consider "unproductive" – a small desert environment that they have yet to burn to construct mansions and golf courses on simply to make a quick buck? Carpetbaggers, that's what they are.

They even claim that the groupings of houses will "harmonize with the environment." Please tell me how a house can harmonize with the environment when the environment is destroyed so that the house can be built. Carpetbaggers, that's what they are.

The facts are clear. These developers only wish to steal from us, steal the scenic beauty that belongs to you and me, steal our treasures and slip a few greenbacks into their pockets. That's funny, I thought rape and theft were illegal in Idaho.

When will Twin Falls stop picking on Jerome?

For almost 90 years, Twin Falls has been at odds with Jerome. It doesn't matter what the subject is, if Twin Falls officials can't be in charge, they want to discourage any project proposed.

It started with the American Falls Dam. Twin Falls wanted the dam to be at Shoshone Falls. Twin Falls decided it was better than Jerome and would not acknowledge people from the "other side of the river."

High school sports: If they lost the game, their boys fought with the Jerome boys after the game. Our teen-agers were not accepted to "drag main" in downtown Twin Falls; they were harassed by the officials.

When the college was started, Jerome students had to pay higher tuition to go to "Twin Falls' College."

The government decided it would be more cost-effective to place the freeway in Jerome County instead of sputh of Twin Falls. Everyone can see what has happened to Blue Lakes Boulevard because of "greedy" Twin Falls.

Magic Valley wanted a regional airport to benefit all communities. This was to be built north of the Snake River and south of the freeway. Because it was not in Twin Falls County, it was shot down and now the valley still has the small airport many miles south of Twin Falls.

The E-911 system was almost a failure because Twin Falls couldn't have the building in its town.

Twin Falls wanted to build a "greenway" along Highway 93 from the freeway in Jerome County, right to the front door of the Magic Valley Mall, using Jerome County water and state money. Twin Falls cannot even take care of the run-down buildings and weeds and dry grass on the sidewalks and in empty lots in its own back yard.

Micron was looking at land in Jerome County, but Twin Falls thought it was in charge of that piece of property and tried to handle all negotiations.

Now we read of dissent over Jerome County wanting to do something better with its own county.

Just to inform you, I am not from another state. I am a third-generation Jerome County person with two more generations after me to carry on. We would like to take care of our own property, and you can take care of your own property.

Bring back forum for amateur writers, poets

I remember when our Tuesday paper included "Chat!" A lot of people lately have been bringing up the Chat! and saying how they miss it too.

We love the poetry and the short stories in it. It was fun to read and, for many of us, it was fun to write for. I know I have the support of many people in the Magic Valley who would love to see the "Chat!" in our paper again.

As a member of the Idaho Writers' League and the Magic Valley Literary Council, please help restore this wonderful outlet to our community.

Gene therapy fails to fix cystic fibrosis, muscular dystrophy

BOSTON (AP) — In a sobering setback for gene therapy, two promising attempts to fix nature's inborn mistakes have failed to help victims of cystic fibrosis and muscular dystrophy.

Scientists in recent years have found the genetic flaws that cause both conditions. They are among the most common lethal inherited diseases, and the discoveries led to speculation that soon there would be cures: Just replace the bad genes with good ones.

The new reports suggest it won't be as easy as scientists had hoped.

Neither experiment was a complete bust. Some healthy genes actually were transferred. But the gene therapy came nowhere close to doing the patients any good.

Proponents of this approach caution against gloom, however. They say that a quick cure is too much to expect in a field that is only about 5 years old.

Indeed, more than 100 other human experiments are under way in efforts to correct a variety of both inherited and acquired illnesses, including AIDS, cancer and heart trouble.

The disappointing reports were published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine. In both experiments, researchers attempted to reverse inherited illnesses by giving victims the healthy genes they were born without.

People with cystic fibrosis carry a genetic flaw that results in thick lung secretions. This mucus harbors infections that eventually destroy the lungs. About 30,000 Americans have the disease.

To try to reverse it, researchers have created weakened adenoviruses — a form of the cold virus — that also contain a good copy of the defective gene. The idea is to let the virus infect the cells in the airways so that the cells carry in the needed gene.

Researchers from the University of North Carolina tried the approach on 12 volunteers with mild to moderate cystic fibrosis. They tested it on the victims' noses, which have cells identical to ones in the lungs.

Dr. Michael R. Knowles and colleagues found that fewer than 1 percent of cells lining the airways accepted the transplanted genes. They estimate that to help victims, the gene transfer would have to be 10 to 100 times more efficient.

Dr. James M. Wilson of the University of Pennsylvania, a co-author of the study, said the strategy may work better in its ultimate target — the lungs — than it does in the nose. Those experiments are under way.

Nevertheless, he said, "this is a heads-up for a potential problem that nobody wants to minimize."

Dr. Ronald Crystal of New York Hospital, who helped pioneer the adenovirus approach, believes scientists can fine-tune the virus so it will reliably carry in the gene.

767 landing gear draws warning

SEATTLE (AP) — Operators of Boeing 767 jetliners have been told by the Federal Aviation Administration to inspect the planes' main landing gear for possible stress cracks.

The order issued Monday by the FAA takes effect immediately and covers all of the estimated 230 widebody 767s in service.

The FAA said it had received reports of four incidents, three of them this year, in which stress cracks were found on the right rear section of the main landing gear.

No injuries have been linked to the cracks. Three of the cracks were discovered while the twin-engine aircraft were parked at airport gates. The fourth happened Sept. 16 while a Delta Air Lines 767-300 was taxiing slowly at Hamburg International Airport in Germany.

In the Germany incident, a piece of the landing gear broke away and the jet came to rest on its right engine, which was severely damaged. The 5-year-old plane, which carried 212 passengers and a crew of 12, was preparing for a nonstop flight to Atlanta.

Airlines have been ordered to inspect main landing gear trunnions every two days and make any necessary repairs.

The trunnion is a T-shaped structure over the landing gear post that provides two of the four attach points to the aircraft.

Cracks in the trunnions, if not corrected, "could result in the collapse of the main landing gear under certain load conditions," the FAA order said.

Troubles force jet to land early

MIAMI (AP) — A Continental Airlines jetliner developed cabin pressure problems Wednesday and was forced to make an emergency landing at Miami International Airport, officials said.

An airport spokeswoman said three of the 112 people on board were treated for minor injuries.

Continental Flight 702 was en route from Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, to Newark, N.J., when the problems occurred. The flight was diverted to Miami, the closest airport, and landed at about 11:20 a.m., airport spokeswoman Angie Torres said.

Quiz show scandal figure in hospital

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Charles Van Doren, whose disgrace after taking part in a rigged game show inspired the movie "Quiz Show," was in critical condition Wednesday, two days after he collapsed and was rushed to a hospital.

He was airlifted to Hartford Hospital by helicopter.

Bruin benefit golf scramble set Sunday

TWIN FALLS – The annual Twin Falls Bruin benefit golf scramble is set for Sunday at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course.

All players must sign up by 8:30 a.m. Sunday for the 9 a.m. shotgun start.

The cost is $15 per person or $25 per couple. Tournament organizers will draw for teams Sunday.

TWIN FALLS – A Bliss soccer player received 18 stitches to close a bleeding wound in his ear which led to Tuesday's game with the Twin Falls Christian Academy ending early.

David Gray was injured when he collided with an opposing player, and coaches were unable to tell if the blood was coming from inside the ear or from a superficial wound, Bliss Athletic Director Diana Butler said.

The official ordered the coach off the field, and the ensuing argument ended when the official ended the game with about 14 minutes remaining and TFCA leading 4-0.

Golf event will raise funds for Twin Falls Public Library

Thirty-six teams of four persons each will participate in the fundraiser, with proceeds going to the library foundation. Players pay $35 to participate in the event.

The 9 a.m. shotgun start will be preceded by a celebrity caddie auction, giving teams the opportunity to bid on local celebs to carry their clubs.

Tigers edge out win over Indians

By Karen Baumert
Times-News writer

BUHL – It was a disappointing win for Jerome coach Brent Clark – but it was a win nevertheless.

After falling to league-leading Wood River in a close volleyball match last week, the Jerome Tigers fought for intensity in beating Buhl 15-4, 15-10 Wednesday.

"I hope we play a lot better the next time we play them or we'll get beat," Clark said. "We didn't want them to score in double figures."

But the Indians did in game two, forcing what Clark called consequences.

"We're going to run some sweet 16's in practice," he said.

'I hope we play a lot better the next time we play them or we'll get beat.'
— Brent Clark, Jerome coach

After taking a 6-1 lead, the Tigers gave up two points on a hitting error and a kill by Buhl's Jana Watson.

Game two began the same.

Jerome took a 7-1 lead. This time Buhl fought back.

Two hitting errors and an ace by Buhl's Marci Jenson pulled the Indians within 4-7.

Then three straight errors by Jerome forged a 7-7 tie. Jerome's woes continued as a net violation gave the Indians the lead.

Janae German came through for him.

She blocked two of Buhl's hitting attempts and then put down two kills off quick sets by Mindy Lloyd for the 12-10 lead.

An ace by Kulm, a hitting error by Buhl and an ace by Mindi Thompson put the game away.

"Janae played well. She is one of the most improved players we have," Clark said of the junior middle blocker.

She ended the night with five kills and two blocks.

The Tigers also won the junior varsity match 15-4, 15-8.

No change after Jones, NFL meet

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Jerry Jones, the Dallas owner bucking the NFL on its licensing policies, met with commissioner Paul Tagliabue and five other owners Wednesday but the dispute remained unresolved.

NFL spokesman Joe Browne said the group planned to meet again, probably next week.

The 4½-hour meeting took place at an undisclosed site in the Washington area, where Tagliabue has a home.

Also at the meeting were owners Roger Headrick of Minnesota, Patrick Bowlen of Denver, Jerry Richardson of Carolina, Dan Rooney of Pittsburgh and Wayne Weaver of Jacksonville.

Browne said all agreed not to discuss the session.

Headrick, Weaver and Rooney are members of the NFL Properties committee, which last week sued the Cowboys and Jones for $300 million. Rooney has been instrumental in settling several formidable disputes, including the five-year labor battle and the long search for a commissioner to succeed Pete Rozelle.

Jones angered other owners when he signed contracts with Nike and Pepsi-Cola. Coca-Cola is the official beverage of the NFL and Nike does not have a licensing agreement from NFL Properties, which licenses other manufacturers to provide uniforms and other apparel.

Jones, who has questioned NFL Properties' revenue sharing policies, has suggested teams be allowed to keep the revenue from sale of their apparel. The Cowboys currently top the market at 20 percent although they were at 3 percent during the period in 1989 and 1990 when they won four games in two seasons.

Jones had been set to announce an agreement with American Express but held off after the suit was filed.

Meridian receiver could hold key to Bruins' success in crucial game

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's that time of year when the Twin Falls Bruins get into those "must win" situations against pod playoff members.

One of those comes up at 8:30 p.m. Friday at Boise State's Bronco field when the Bruins meet the Meridian Warriors. Burley plays Eagle in the 6 p.m. lidlifter.

"It's definitely critical for us. To get into the playoffs you have to win three games," said Twin Falls Coach Mark Schaal.

And Schaal believes Meridian is one of those teams Twin Falls has a legitimate shot at beating despite the Bruins' youth.

"They are a lot like us. About the same size. I think the two teams match up well," said the coach.

But there is one question that Twin Falls must answer if it will indeed beat the Warriors: can the Bruins contain wideout Kish Beverly?

Bruin coach heads for hills - and relief

He was successful but the meat wasn't the only reason for the trip.

"After that Highland game I had to go out and shoot at something," he said with a laugh.

Twin Falls has been vulnerable to passing, particularly deep passing as shown last week by Highland in posting the 62-0 win.

"I don't know if Beverly is as good a receiver as Highland's tight end but there's no doubt he's their go-to guy," Schaal said. "They throw to him, handoff to him on reverses and put him in motion to try to get him open for more passes."

Kish caught four scoring passes last weekend. All the throws came from 6-2 senior quarterback Jared Hill.

"Hill is a decent thrower and his major trait is keeping the ball on the dive option and coming out with it," Schaal said. "Their offense is the dive option, the keeper option and go deep to Beverly if he gets open."

"Defensively they sit in a 4-3 and play a lot of three-deep secondary," Schaal said. "They play to not give up the big play, make you drive the field in a lot of plays and hope you foul up somewhere along the way."

Schaal said he believes his troops have recovered from the Highland massacre.

"We went back to the basics this week," he said. "Executing our offense, blocking and tackling. I think the players responded pretty well."

Schaal said the Bruins will be without wide receiver Jason Gillen, who sustained a leg injury against Highland.

Gooden ready to impress Yankees

New York Daily News

NEW YORK — Almost a year after being "so high I couldn't even play with my kids," Dwight Gooden will walk into the Yankees' offices Monday morning to talk about a job.

When the final out of the regular season goes into the books Sunday night, Gooden will be eligible to begin the first day of the rest of his baseball life. And while he hopes to impress the Yankee brass with his state of mind, he says he has turned the corner after an 18-month suspension from baseball and the part of his life he calls "rock bottom."

Gooden says he is ready for another chance, vows this time will be different and is eager to so tell Yankee management. Those were the overriding themes Wednesday in an exclusive interview with the Daily News from his St. Petersburg home. Gooden talked about his past, his recovery and his return to baseball.

"The day before being suspended," Gooden said, "I'd been out getting high, and when I came home I was so high I couldn't even play with my kids. Then the letter came telling me I was out for the year. Looking back, it was the best thing that could have happened to me because if they had said we're going to wait a couple of months and re-evaluate my situation, I probably wouldn't have gotten into the program I'm in now. (Acting commissioner Bud Selig's) letter was my notice that I'd hit rock bottom."

According to those who have monitored Gooden since his second suspension in November, these are not merely the same empty words he ut-

Perfect records in Canyon in jeopardy as matchups may clear up title picture

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

The Canyon Conference boasts three undefeated teams midway through the season but by next Wednesday night the race could be over.

Defending champion Glenns Ferry, Wendell and Gooding are unbeaten in league play and the conference spotlight falls at Glenns Ferry Friday night where Wendell is the adversary. The Pilots return to Gooding County next Wednesday to take on the Gooding Senators, who must beat the Filer Wildcats at home Friday to set up a possible title showdown. But if things work out a little differently, the league title might be in the air until Gooding plays at Wendell in the season-finales.

Meanwhile, the Sawtooth eight-man Conference could find a little more breathing room around the top due to this week's schedule.

Unbeaten and defending champion Carey, 5-0, will travel to Fairfield where Camas County is 3-1. There are two other once-beaten teams in the alignment, Rockland and North Gem. Rockland entertains Richfield at 4 p.m. Friday while North Gem has the weekend off.

The Class A-2 playoff chase gets underway at Jerome when the 3-1 Tigers will host the 1-4 Wood River Wolverines. The other A-2 school, Buhl, coming off its first win, stayed in non-league play, visiting Kimberly where the Bulldogs 2-2.

For the first time ever, Burley and Twin Falls will share billing against District 3 competition in Boise State's Bronco Stadium.

Burley, 1-4, gets the 6 p.m. start against the brand new Eagle High School Mustangs. Twin Falls takes on Boise in the 8:30 p.m. nightcap. The Bruins have evened out at 2-2 while Boise is 0-4.

Minico, 1-3, remains home to play the Caldwell Cougars.

With most of the Canyon Conference eyes on Glenns Ferryy, Wendell and Gooding, Valley travels to Declo for the other battle of the night. Valley is 0-4 while Declo is 2-2.

Rounding out the eight-man schedule will be Sho-Ban at Castleford, Clark County 1-3, at Dietrich, 0-5, and Hansen, 1-3, at Shoshone, 2-2.

The Magic Valley 11-man league has two games on tap, defending champion Murtaugh, 1-4, opening in Malta against Raft River, 2-1, while Mackay, 1-2, takes the long trip to Oakley, 0-4.

Angels down M's to keep hopes alive

SEATTLE (AP) — The California Angels didn't want the Seattle Mariners to clinch a tie for the AL West at their expense.

"We didn't want to give them a chance to celebrate in front of us," manager Marcel Lachemann said after California kept the division race close with a 2-0 victory over Seattle on Wednesday night. "The guys didn't want that to happen and they didn't let it happen."

Chuck Finley (14-12) was the Angels' hero, allowing only three hits in 6 1-3 innings before a screaming crowd of 50,212.

"That's the loudest I've ever seen it in the Kingdome," Finley said. "I felt like I was in the end zone out there. It was actually echoing in my ears."

Trying desperately to regain their momentum with time running out, the Angels cut Seattle's lead in the division to two games with four to go. The Angels stayed 1½ games behind the New York Yankees in the wild-card race.

A victory by Seattle would have clinched a tie for the division title, but instead the Mariners had their seven-game overall and nine-game home winning streaks snapped.

"Tonight our bats took a little day off," Seattle manager Lou Piniella said. "Not because we didn't swing them well. Finley pitched very well. He moved the ball around, changed speeds and made the pitches when he had to."

The Mariners still like their chances of winning their first division crown.

"We're still hot," Mike Blowers said. "Any time you win seven of eight at home, you have to feel pretty good about that. We lost; but we still feel good about our situation."

Finley, pitching on three days' rest because Mark Langston has bicep tendinitis in his left arm, ended a personal four-game losing streak with his first win since Aug. 24. He walked five and struck out four.

Finley focused on the Mariners, not the division race.

"I knew we needed a good win, but I really didn't go out there with the thought the whole organization was riding on my back," he said. "I really didn't need to do that. I didn't want to overestimate the value of the game. All I thought about was pitching."

Finley was taken out after walking Mike Blowers and Rich Amaral with one out in the seventh. Troy Percival struck out pinch-hitter Doug Strange and Vince Coleman to end Seattle's seventh-inning threat.

American League

Yankees 6, Brewers 3

MILWAUKEE — David Cone, working on three days' rest for the first time in four years, pitched eight strong innings to keep New York 1½ games up in the wild-card race.

Cone (18-8) improved to 9-2 in 13 starts since the Yankees got him from Toronto on July 28. He allowed one run and six hits, walked three and struck out five.

Left fielder David Hulse's three-run error in the sixth gave the Yankees a 4-0 lead. Randy Velarde hit a two-run homer in the eighth.

Rookie Brian Givens (5-7) held the Yankees to one earned run on four hits in 5 1-3 innings and was replaced by Joe Slusarski with the bases loaded in the sixth.

Rangers 11, Athletics 2

ARLINGTON, Texas — Rusty Greer's three-run homer highlighted a five-run first inning and Kenny Rogers matched a career high with his 16th victory as Texas beat Oakland

The Rangers kept alive their slim hopes for the franchise's first playoff appearance in 23 years. Oakland, already eliminated from post-season contention, lost its fifth straight.

Rogers (16-7) improved to 4-0 in September, keeping the A's in check on six hits over eight innings. He struck out two and walked two.

Will Clark started the first-inning outburst against Todd Van Poppel (4-8) with a solo homer, his 15th. Juan Gonzalez followed with a single, took second on Mickey Tettleton's single and scored on a single by Ivan Rodriguez. Greer then delivered the big blow of the game, clearing the bases with his 13th homer to push Texas' lead to 5-0.

Tigers 7, Red Sox 5

BOSTON — Knuckleballer Tim Wakefield had his third straight poor start as Detroit outslugged playoff-bound Boston.

Wakefield (16-7), who earlier this year was considered a contender for the Cy Young award, is 2-6 with a 6.02 ERA in nine outings since starting the year 14-1. He allowed 11 hits and five runs in seven innings.

Jose Lima (3-9) was the beneficiary of 14 Detroit hits. Travis Fryman hit his 15th home run and Tony Clark was 2-for-4 for his third multi-hit game of the series. Chad Curtis, Cecil Fielder, Bobby Higginson, Phil Nevin and Ron Tingley also had two hits apiece.

The Red Sox lost for the fourth time in five games despite three hits Jose Canseco and from Mo Vaughn, including his 39th home run.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 0

TORONTO — Scott Erickson pitched a three-hit shutout as Baltimore blanked Toronto for the second straight night.

Erickson (13-10) struck out five and walked none in his second straight complete game, his fourth in his last five starts and his sixth this season. His second shutout of the year and the ninth of his career gave him a 4-0 record and 1.47 ERA in five September starts.

The Orioles have won eight of their last 10 games while the Blue Jays have dropped seven of their last nine. Toronto was shut out in consecutive games for the first time since 1986.

White Sox 6, Royals 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Barry Lyons drove in a career-high five runs and Mike Sirotka got his first major league victory, leading Chicago past Kansas City.

Sirotka (1-2), who spent the season in the minors before he was brought up Sept. 5, allowed three hits in eight innings, struck out eight and walked two. Bill Simas followed with a perfect ninth.

Indians 9, Twins 6

MINNEAPOLIS — Albert Belle and Eddie Murray each homered twice to lead Cleveland over Minnesota, keeping a 100-win season possible for the Indians.

Belle, who hit his 48th and 49th homers, became the eighth player in major league history to reach 100 extra-base hits. Murray's second-inning homer gave him his 75th RBI of the season, tying Hank Aaron's major-league record of 19 straight seasons with at least 75 RBIs.

Bucs place hurdle in Astros' path

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston reliever Todd Jones hurt the Astros' chances of winning the NL wild card Wednesday by walking the bases loaded in the 11th inning.

Mike Henneman was almost as much to blame, giving up a two-run single to Rich Aude that led Pittsburgh to a 6-3 victory.

The loss snapped a four-game winning streak and dropped the Astros one game behind Los Angeles in the NL wild-card race. The Dodgers played the Colorado Rockies, who were another half-game ahead, later Wednesday.

"Really, it's not a crushing defeat," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "They're not going to lose ground on one of the teams ahead of them. I'm sure it's a tough loss but it's really not a crusher."

Pittsburgh scored three runs in the seventh, the Pirates' first runs in 19 innings, before Houston tied it in the bottom half.

With one out in the 11th, Jones (6-4) walked Al Martin, who stole second. One out later, Jones intentionally walked Orlando Merced and walked Jeff King. Henneman then gave up Aude's two-run single to center.

"This has got to be one of the toughest things I've had to face," Jones said.

"The team was struggling and I didn't do my job. (Doug) Brocail pitched well, (Doug) Drabek pitched well but I let the team down."

Aude said he was looking for a split-finger fastball from Henneman.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 3

CHICAGO — Kevin Foster (12-11) struck out a career-high 13 as Chicago won its sixth straight. Luis Gonzalez, Jose Hernandez and Ozzie Timmons had solo homers for the Cubs.

Gonzalez homered on the third pitch by Allen Watson (7-9) and Hernandez homered two pitches later.

Padres 4, Giants 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Fernando Valenzuela (8-3) won his sixth straight decision, allowing one run and four hits in 6 1-3 innings. He also singled in a run.

Shawn Estes (0-3) allowed four runs and five hits in seven innings. Trevor Hoffman got three outs for his 30th save.

Mets 5, Reds 4
Mets 9, Reds 2

NEW YORK — New York swept a doubleheader, winning the opener as Robert Person (1-0) got his first big league victory. He allowed one run and three hits in seven innings and struck out seven.

Alex Ochoa led the Mets' 13-hit attack with a double and two singles. John Smiley (12-5) allowed five runs and 11 hits in six innings.

In the second game, Bill Spiers singled three times and drove in three runs. Reid Cornelius (3-7) allowed allowed two runs and five hits in six innings.

Dave Burba (10-4) gave up four runs and six hits in five innings.

Braves 6, Phillies 0

PHILADELPHIA — Greg Maddux (192) won his major league-leading 19th game, allowing three hits in six shutout innings. He finished the season with a 1.63 ERA, just above his 1.56 ERA of 1994. Maddux is the first pitcher with an ERA under 1.80 in consecutive seasons since Walter Johnson in 1918-19. Michael Mimbs (9-7) gave up five runs and eight hits in 4 1-3 innings.

Marlins 9, Expos 3

MIAMI — Jeff Conine became the first Florida player to reach 100 RBIs in a season when he drove in four runs.

Pat Rapp (14-7) allowed three hits in seven scoreless innings, winning his ninth consecutive decision since Aug. 6 and increasing his club-record shutout string to 24 innings.

Gabe White (1-2), making his first start since June 18, 1994, gave up six runs in 2 2-3 innings.

Dodgers lead Rockies

LOS ANGELES – The Los Angeles Dodgers were leading the Colorado Rockies 7-4 in the top of the ninth inning Wednesday.

Bruin girls take soccer match from Minico squad

The Times-News

RUPERT - The Minico girls' soccer team continues to make strides in its first season, the next step is to make goals.

The Spartans fell victim Wednesday to the Twin Falls Soccer Club for the second time this season, losing 3-0 after holding Twin Falls scoreless in the first half.

"We're improving. Each game, we're getting better," Minico coach Stephanie Stevens said. "We're basically just learning how to kick the ball."

The Spartans' Michelle Miller kicked the ball into the net in the first half for an apparent goal, but it was waved off after the official ruled the indirect penalty kick had not touched anyone before slipping into the goal.

Giesler also had a foot in Twin Falls' second score, recording the assist when Teresa Collins scored 49 minutes into the match.

Holly Fiske finished the scoring for Twin Falls with a shot past Minico goalkeeper Jackie Rasnick.

GOODING – Dietrich survived an early loss and a thrilling second game to take three-game match from the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind Tuesday night.

The Raptors took the opener, 15-10, but Dietrich rallied for the 17-15 win in the second game and won it with a 15-7 decision in the finale.

Gooden

tered when he came out of the Smithers Institute and Betty Ford Center.

"Even when I came out of Smithers (for cocaine abuse in 1987), I never stopped drinking," Gooden said. "The thing was, the Mets knew that, my teammates knew it. Everybody did. I'd drink right there in the clubhouse. ... I guess they just figured it wasn't drugs, so it was OK."

The past eight months, Gooden has attended daily morning meetings of Narcotics Anonymous, a 12-step program. In the afternoons, he pitches to college and high school players at Eckerd College.

He never lost his fastball. It was the source of his addiction he has had to find.

"... As an addict I know now I can't take anything addictive — not even Tylenol or aspirin. I really started going downhill in '91. I was in no set program, and I was coming off my arm operation and the team was going bad. I was drinking heavily and that led to doing drugs again. I just wish I'd known then what I know now about addiction."

Sources said Gooden has dropped agent Bill Goodstein and decided to take charge of his own negotiations after watching Goodstein's acrimonious and unnecessarily lengthy dealings with the Yankees over Darryl Strawberry.

Briefly in sports

Coach dumps retirement for return

MESA, Ariz. — Former Mesa Community College basketball coach Tom Bennett came out of retirement Wednesday to guide the Thunderbirds for one more season.

Standifer, 28, resigned Sept. 18 over his role in the recruitment of Richie Parker, a New York high school star and convicted sex offender.

Parker, 18, pleaded guilty in January of forcing a 14-year-old girl into performing oral sex in January 1994 while both attended Manhattan Center High School. He was placed on five years' probation.

Mesa Community officials have allowed Parker to enroll in school, but barred him from playing basketball this season.

"If I'm here for one year, it gives us a golden opportunity to advertise the job a little sooner and think about who the college wants to bring in on a permanent basis," Bennett said.

Flyweight expected to defend title

Romero's promoter, Top Rank Inc., said the title defense against Tunisia's Ferid Ben Jeddou (17-0-2) will take place in Palm Springs, Calif., not Las Vegas, as originally planned.

Romero of Albuquerque fell to 25-1 when he lost a non-title bout to Willy Salazar on Sept. 8 in Las Vegas.

During the fight, Romero fractured a bone inside his left eye. The injury caused double vision and gave the boxer trouble moving the eye up and down. A 90-minute operation on Sept. 13 corrected the problem, said Romero's attorney, Ron Koch.

Ruelas, No. 1 contender will fight

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — World Boxing Council super featherweight champion Gabriel Ruelas makes the third defense of his title on Dec. 1 at the Fantasy Springs Casino against No. 1 contender and two-time world champion Azumah Nelson.

Ruelas, 41-2 with 23 knockouts, will be trying to avenge one of his two career losses. He earned his first shot at a world title in 1993, but lost a unanimous decision to Nelson.

Nelson, 37, has a 37-3-2 record with 26 knockouts. He will be fighting for the first time since May 1994, when he lost to James Leija.

Lakers ink pact with only '95 draftee

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Frankie King, the only selection of the Los Angeles Lakers in the 1995 NBA draft, signed with the team Wednesday.

The 6-foot-1 guard from Western Carolina finished second in NCAA scoring last season and was the 37th pick of the draft.

He was the Southern Conference player of the year the last two seasons. As a senior, he averaged 26.5 points, 7.3 rebounds and 3.4 assists for the Catamounts. Texas Christian's Kurt Thomas was the only NCAA Division I player to have a higher scoring average.

Coca-Cola adds Cowboys' Smith

DALLAS — Jerry Jones may be a Pepsi-Nike man, but his star running back isn't quite in step: Emmitt Smith has become the second Cowboy to hawk Coca-Cola.

Smith, who has a new line of sports apparel called the Emmitt Zone, has arranged to have the sweatshirts, jackets, shirts and hats made by Starter and promoted by official NFL sponsor Coca-Cola. Company spokesman Ben Deutsch would not disclose how much Smith was paid for the campaign.

Smith is the only NFL star promoting Coke nationally, Deutsch said. Quarterback Troy Aikman signed a deal last month to be a pitchman for Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of North Texas.

Boxing great Schmeling turns 90

FRANKFURT, Germany — Max Schmeling, the German heavyweight who was world champion in the 1930s and claimed a knockout over Joe Louis as one of his greatest achievements, turned 90 on Thursday.

Schmeling's birthday wish? "To live to be 100," he said in a Kicker sports magazine interview.

Schmeling, now a wealthy businessman, has kept out of the public eye since the 1987 death of his wife, film star Anny Ondra.

"For 70 years, everything about me and my life has already been written," Schmeling said.

Schmeling, who said he planned to go to either to Sweden or Norway to celebrate his birthday in private, still works. He opened a Coca-Cola distributing company in Hamburg in 1957, and comes in to his office a few times a week.

Warriors' owner seeks new venue

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Money, not location, could determine whether the Golden State Warriors' new owner will keep the team in Oakland or move it to San Jose.

Owner Christopher Cohan, who took over the Warriors last January, wants to move the Warriors out of the Oakland Coliseum Arena, the NBA's smallest at 15,000 seats.

In Oakland, Cohan would be able to run a new arena but would need to finance construction himself.

San Jose, on the other hand, already has a $170 million arena that opened in 1993. But Cohan would have to share it — and revenues — with the San Jose Sharks of the National Hockey League.

It's official: NBC gets 2000, 2002 Games

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — NBC's record $1.25 billion contract for U.S. television rights to the Olympics in 2000 and 2002 was formally signed Wednesday.

In a deal announced last month, NBC will pay $705 million for exclusive rights to the 2000 Summer Games in Sydney, Australia, and $545 million for the 2002 Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City. Both are records by huge margins.

The contracts were signed during a ceremony at the International Olympic Committee headquarters in Lausanne. Among those signing were NBC Sports president Dick Ebersol and officials of the IOC, the Sydney and Salt Lake organizing committees and the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Bears' linebacker alleges NFL bias

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — An angry Vinson Smith, fined $12,000 by the NFL for a hit on St. Louis quarterback Chris Miller, said Wednesday that the NFL is protecting big money players at the expense of others.

Miller had to leave Sunday's game and suffered his fourth concussion in two years after he was hit high by Smith, a Bears linebacker.

Smith claimed he didn't intentionally try to hurt Miller, his teammate eight years ago in Atlanta. He said he was jumping in the air as Miller released the ball and the only way he could have avoided Miller "was to sprout wings and fly away."

Cavs ship Price to Bullets for pick

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mark Price, a four-time All-Star point guard and the NBA's career leader in free throw accuracy, was traded to the Washington Bullets on Wednesday in exchange for a first-round draft pick in 1996.

The Bullets, which had the worst record in the Eastern Conference last season, had been seeking a high-profile, veteran point guard to run its talented but young front-court, which includes rookie Rasheed Wallace, second-year player Juwan Howard and third-year pro Chris Webber.

"With the addition of Mark Price, we feel as though we have accomplished that goal and have not had to part with any of our corps of young talent," Bullets general manager John Nash said in a statement.

Facing at least half a season without starting center Brad Daugherty and a need to add some youth to an aging roster, the Cavaliers felt they had to deal Price, general manager Wayne Embry said.

"But we are not going to concede anything," Embry said. "We have a core of young players now that we intend to build with."

Price, 31, a 6-footer from Georgia Tech who was Dallas' No. 2 pick in the 1986 draft, was acquired by the Cavaliers later that same day in exchange for a second-round pick in the 1989 draft.

Embry, Cavaliers owner Gordon Gund and coach Mike Fratello praised Price as a "truly great player."

"He's the kind if player I would pay to see," Fratello said. "That's because people can identify with him. You see him on the street in a T-shirt and jeans and he's a little guy like you and me. So you think you could play as good as he does — until you see what he does on the basketball court."

One of the NBA's best perimeter shooters, Price is coming off a season in which he was hampered by injuries. He broke a bone in his right wrist Jan. 14; a supportive screw was inserted during a surgery Jan. 25 at the Cleveland Clinic.

He missed 27 games because of that injury and another seven games for other minor injuries.

The wrist injury prevented Price from competing during the All-Star break for a third consecutive 3-point shooting championship.

The announcement that Daugherty, who had back surgery last year and was reported to be improving, would be out for at least the first half of the season was an additional blow, and was a factor in the decision to trade Price, Embry said.

Sixers reach deal with touted guard

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jerry Stackhouse, the third overall pick in last June's NBA draft, signed with the Philadelphia 76ers on Wednesday, becoming the highest selection so far to join his new team.

"The word to describe Jerry Stackhouse is 'ferocious,'" Philadelphia coach and general manager John Lucas said. "He's a competitor and a potential superstar."

Under the league's new rookie salary scale, Stackhouse will receive approximately $6.855 million over three years after leaving North Carolina as a sophomore.

"Signing was the easy part," said Stackhouse, modeling his new red, white and blue 76ers jersey. "The tough part is going to be getting the players to come together as a team."

The 21-year-old guard joins NBA veterans Vernon Maxwell and Richard Dumas in a new lineup that Lucas hopes will give the 76ers the speed and aggression they need to improve on last year's 24-58 record, fourth worst in the league.

The team is looking to the 6-5, 215-pound Stackhouse to become their dominant shooting guard, one who is not only a danger from the 3-point line, but a constant threat to knife or bull his way through the defense and open up the lane.

In his two seasons at North Carolina, Stackhouse used quick moves to the basket, a solid 15-foot jumper, and dogged inside play to average 15.7 points per game.

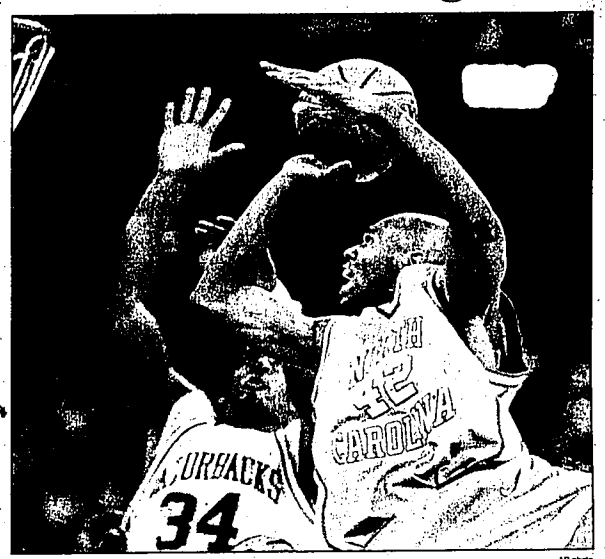

Last year as a sophomore, Stackhouse led the Tar Heels in both scoring and rebounding, averaging 19.2 points and 8.2 boards. He was an Associated Press pick for first team All-American; and Sports Illustrated named him College Player of the Year.

"I've been working on my perimeter shooting, looking to get a little deeper," Stackhouse said. Lucas said he was impressed that Stackhouse came to Philadelphia early to start playing pick-up games with his new teammates.

"I'm using to being a banger — now, I have to get used to being banged," said Stackhouse.

He joins Maxwell, the former Rockets player signed Tuesday, and Dumas on a squad that owner Howard Katz said was designed to make the 76ers tougher, faster, and more aggressive.

"We're not bringing in guys who are studying for the priesthood," Katz said. "Last year we played soft, and John Lucas and I looked for players that could change that."

AP photo

Jerry Stackhouse, an all-star guard while a sophomore at North Carolina last season, signed a $6.8 million deal with the Philadelphia 76ers Wednesday.

Maxwell, suspended for 10 games from the Houston Rockets last season for charging into the stands and punching a fan, certainly has the reputation for physical play. He also has a 13.7 point per game average after eight years in the NBA.

"Basketball players like to run with Maxwell," Katz said. "He's intense. He gets the most from every guy on the floor."

With one spot open on the team, Lucas said he is looking for another big man. Former Sixer Rick Mahorn has been working out in unofficial practices with the squad.

He and 6-8, 219-pound Willie Burton, a 1990 first-round draft pick who turned unrestricted free agent after five years with the Miami Heat, are believed to be the top contenders.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Notre Dame-Ohio State game Saturday involves history, tradition, national rankings, pride — and commerce.

With $25 tickets going for as much as $1,300 per seat, even if the game ends in a tie, the lopsided winner is capitalism.

All of the 95,000 or so seats in Ohio Stadium have been sold, most of them several months ago. Those wanting to be at the first game between the Irish and Buckeyes since 1936 need not bother even going to Ohio State's athletic ticket office.

"It's so crazy, we have to wear headsets because your arms get so tired from picking up the phone, putting it down, picking up the phone," ticket office accountant Dawn Moore said.

The response to all callers — as many as 2,000 a day — is there are no tickets available. You're on your own.

Those seeking tickets turn to the want ads. Every major newspaper in Ohio is running classifieds for game tickets. There were 135 ads selling or buying Notre Dame-Ohio State tickets in Wednesday's editions of The Columbus Dispatch. Scalping tickets is permitted in Columbus.

Rumors have circulated for weeks that seats were going for $1,000 apiece. That caused a lot of fans to test the market with the ads.

But the pros, like owner George Gaines of Tickets Galore, said those are false hopes.

"We've got six lines open and 90 percent of the calls are people selling tickets, not buying them," Gaines said. "It's so blown out of proportion. There'll be 5,000 people out at the stadium Saturday. If this was illegal, there wouldn't be enough jails to hold them all."

A seller who would only identify himself as "Dan" said Wednesday he had four tickets together in the top or C deck at Ohio Stadium. He advertised in the Dispatch and the Chicago Tribune.

Asked if profit was his only consideration, he chuckled and said, "It's America."

Ohio State coach John Cooper, anticipating the crush for tickets, laid down the law to his family.

"I told my gang a long time ago, don't ask for Notre Dame tickets," he said. "I don't have any out of town people coming to the game."

Buckeye quarterback Bob Hoying said he has been seeking tickets to no avail. "I've been looking for those tickets since the start of camp and I haven't found one yet," he said.

John Cowan, general manager of Ticket X Change, said his company has sold tickets to buyers in California, Alabama, Tennessee and several other states. Cowan said he knows of tickets going for as much as $1,300 a seat, but that most are in the $100 to $125 range.

Cowan said his company wasn't making as much profit off tickets as Ohio State was, but added, "We're not here to bring peace and harmony to the world. We're here to make a profit."

Sooners forget '94 rout against Buffaloes

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma coach Howard Schnellenberger doesn't plan to spend much time watching it. Receiver P.J. Mills doesn't, either. He played in it and doesn't need to watch it again.

It is last year's game against Colorado, a 45-7 rout that could have been worse. Rashaan Salaam ran for 153 yards and four touchdowns — in the first half. The Sooners threw four interceptions, lost a fumble and were a cool 3-of-17 on third-down conversions.

"The one bright spot of the evening was the fact that Oklahoma was not shut out," says the Oklahoma media guide.

Now, there's a highlight.

No. 10 Oklahoma (3-0) gets a chance for some redemption Saturday night when the fourth-ranked Buffaloes (4-0) visit Norman. Like last year, the game will be at night and will be televised by ESPN. But Mills thinks that's where the similarities end.

"These are two different teams than last year, and I think you're going to have a different result as a result of that," he said.

Colorado doesn't have Salaam anymore. He was one of 10 Buffalo players who were drafted by the NFL.

The Buffaloes don't have the same coach anymore, either. Rick Neuheisel has replaced Bill McCartney, who stepped down in a surprise move after last season.

Oklahoma also doesn't have the same coach. Gary Gibbs resigned under pressure, and now Schnellenberger has taken over, sparking talk among fans of a national championship once again.

"I think it's a new deal at OU," Neuheisel said.

"I know coach Schnellenberger wasn't involved in that game and I know he's telling his players 'That's last year, this is this year.' And he's absolutely right. Last year means nothing. This year is the question."

Perhaps the biggest question is how well Oklahoma's offense will be able to move the ball. The Sooners are unbeaten, but Colorado's defense is in a different league than what Oklahoma has seen from San Diego State, Southern Methodist and North Texas.

Norman commits to Buick

But his new $6 million boat, Aussie Rules, was struck by lightning in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., recently and destroyed, forcing him to cancel a two-week fishing trip.

So the world's top-ranked player and PGA Tour leading money winner chose to listen to PGA champion Steve Elkington and other golf stars, who raved about the Mountain View Golf Course at Callaway Gardens and the relaxed atmosphere at the Buick Challenge.

The tournament, formerly called the Buick Southern Open, starts Thursday on the 7,057-yard, par 72 course with a new name; a larger purse ($1 million), its first national television audience (ESPN) and its strongest field ever.

Five of the top 10 current money leaders, and three of the four current major winners — Ben Crenshaw, John Daly and defending champion Elkington — are playing. "Word of mouth spreads quick about this place," Norman said. "I should be fishing right now, but my boat got scorched. The guys kept saying how challenging the course was. You need to hit a lot of good shots here."

When Norman committed to the tournament, he instantly became the favorite because he's won three times this year and averaged more than $100,000 per start. Add two second-place finishes, including the U.S. Open, and a third at the Masters, and Norman is closing in on his third money title and fourth Vardon Trophy.

Bowling council takes break from meetings for a little – golf

Bowling
Thelma Tucker

Meetings, meetings and more meetings was the story at the Idaho Bowling Council Jamboree held this past weekend, but it was not all work and no play. On Friday the golf tournament was held at Canyon Springs Inn. Thirteen brave souls challenged the chilly last day of summer. Winners with gross scores of 63 were Don Gummersall, Boise, Ed Mackley, ABC Rep. from Mississippi and Bruce Cameron, Twin Falls. The net score winners at 65.5 were Londa Stout, Kimberly and Larie Hash, Filer.

• • •

Also held on Friday at the Magic Bowl was the nine-pin no-tap bowling tournament. Frank Meserole, Emmett was the adult winner with an 800 series and Brandi Hostetler at 716 from Ada County was the Junior winner.

• • •

Wally Studer, wife Jan and children Justin and Jenny were honored at the Saturday night banquet when named the Bowling Family of the Year. The Studer family resides in Rupert and are the owners of the Rupert Bowl.

On Saturday morning at the Bowladrome, the YABA High Four tournament was held with 104 participants making up 26 teams. Each bowling center affliated with YABA in the State was invited to enter their top four Junior Bowlers, two boys and two girls. In the A division the 20th Century Lanes, Boise, team of Glen Jensen, Sara Coats, Brandi Hostetler and Terry Leuenhagen were first with a 3,527 score on four games with handicap. Second at 3,525 was Sunset Bowl, Buhl.

Bowling for Sunset were Stephanie Lemmons, Kristina Povalouski, Bryan Cheney and Mike Short.

In the B division, Caribou County at 3,655 was first. Team members were Korena Lewis, Cody Benson, Louise Benson and Dwight Adams. At 3,579 Meridian Lanes with Steven Martinez, Miranda Garvin, Crystal Pethel and John Howard were second.

There were 51 games of 200 or better rolled during the tournament. Steve Martinez, Meridian rolled 100 pins over his average and Robert Dresser converted the 7-10 split.

During the Jamboree, entry forms were distributed for the Men's and Women's State Tournaments as well as the Idaho State Seniors and Northwest Tournaments. These entry forms are now available at all of your local bowling centers.

Columnist misses point on CSI quota issue

In response to Larry Hovey's column concerning the "quota" system for the College of Southern Idaho's sports programs, I feel that Mr. Hovey has missed the point.

Mainstream thought – with respect to college and, unfortunately, even high school sports – closely follows the "media-pro" rhetoric: Winning is the "only" thing. For volleyball Coach Ben Stroud to have to deal with local athletes as to their loyalty and respect to the team is part of this job. To say that the importation of foreign players is a direct result of local players' lack of discipline seems to be a reflection of the coache's inability to form a cohesive team.

The pride of a CSI team that doesn't give local athletes the opportunity to compete dissolves itself when going out of the area (in this case, the United States) for only one reason: To compete on a national level. I would much rather have the opportunity to watch local athletes compete in sports than win championships with athletes that will probably vacate the area, never again contributing anything to the community that gave them their education.

If sports are supposed to develop character, discipline, teamwork, loyalty, honesty and a sense of fair play, let's start these ideals at the administrative and coaching levels by putting the great athletes of the Magic Valley first, creating a desire in our kids to go to CSI and just maybe your national championship teams will follow on their heels.

Dad, son face off when Dolphins travel to meet resurgent Bengals

CINCINNATI (AP) — Shula versus Shula, The Sequel, is drawing a lot less attention than the original. Maybe it has something to do with the fact that last year's game was such a flop.

Don Shula's Miami Dolphins beat Dave Shula's Cincinnati Bengals 23-7 last Oct. 2 in a dreary game. The only remarkable thing about the first father-son head coaching matchup in NFL history was that it was a first.

The rematch Sunday at Riverfront Stadium has the feel of a rerun, with little of the first-year intrigue. The national media has shown a lot less interest, the NFL isn't making it the centerpiece game of the week, and the coaches are answering a lot fewer questions about their family.

It has become just another game in most respects, though still special for the Shulas.

"It adds a little more excitement to the game for me, certainly," Dave Shula said Wednesday. "Their football team is a heck of a good football team, and that gets our guys' attention."

"I'm not even sure if you asked our players how many of them would even connect it (Shula versus Shula), so I don't plan on talking about it."

Last year, both Shulas were involved in national conference calls with the media, and their pregame meeting on the field was recorded for history. Fans settled in to see if Junior could outsmart Dad, who happens to have the most coaching wins in NFL history.

There was a sense of something special afoot.

"Last year, it was historic and exciting," Don Shula said Wednesday in a conference call. "This year it's going to be talked about as the second year, but obviously the first time is always very, very exciting."

Maybe for the Shulas, but not for those who had to sit through the game.

The Bengals stunned the Dolphins with David Klingler's 51-yard touchdown pass to Darnay Scott early in the game, then managed just 177 yards the rest of the game. It became obvious quickly that coaching would have little to do with the outcome.

Meanwhile, the Dolphins methodically piled up yards and points behind Dan Marino. His 4-yard touchdown pass to Mark Ingram put the Dolphins up 17-7 early in the second half, and the Dolphins sat on the lead the rest of the way.

Tyson misses flight to fight press conference

NEW YORK (AP) — Maybe Mike Tyson and Buster Mathis Jr. could have talked about their ties to boxing's past, but Tyson missed the news conference Wednesday because he missed his flight from Cleveland.

The two could meet face to face for the first time next week in New York before their free television fight on the Fox network Nov. 4 in Las Vegas.

The fight is scheduled as a 12-round heavyweight elimination in which the light hitting Mathis is expected to be eliminated in short order.

Tyson, who won his first bout in four years in 89 seconds over Peter McNeeley, could fight for the piece of the title in March.

Four other title fights will be on the card, and two of them probably will be seen live on a TV show expected to last about three hours. It also was announced that Fox and Don King will begin a year-long monthly series of televised fights beginning Jan. 27.

The late Cus D'Amato, Tyson's legal guardian and boxing guru, also was involved in the career of Mathis' father, who had been in poor health for years and died Sept. 6 at age 52.

"He was trained by Cus for about three years," Mathis, 25, said.

"He loved Cus. Cus was my godfather."

D'Amato also is Mathis' middle name. Mathis' father had no middle name, so the son is called Junior to avoid confusion.

Mathis was trained by his father for all of his pro fights (20-0, 1 no contest, six knockouts), and now will be trained by Joey Fariello, who took over his father's training after D'Amato left.

Reading Council sets meeting Saturday

TWIN FALLS – The Magic Valley Reading Council is sponsoring a "Professional Pause Morning" from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Saturday in the lunch room at the Lincoln Elementary School.

All new and returning teachers, administrators and parents throughout the Magic Valley are invited to the event that features books, friends and food.

Diane Calbo from Horizon Elementary School in Jerome will discuss learning styles as they relate to reading and writing. The meeting's purpose is to share resources and plan Reading Council activities for the year. Other activities include a brunch served to all participants, a book display provided by Barnes and Noble and registration availability for membership in the Magic Valley Reading Council and the International Reading Council.

For more information, call Charlene Barnhart or Laurie Geren at Lincoln Elementary School at 733-1321.

Clinton sends woman, 90, congrats on Eagle Scout award

BURLEY – Marie Lambert of Burley asked the White House to send a greeting for her mother's 90th birthday celebration in December.

She was a little surprised recently when she opened a letter from Washington. It congratulated the mom – Marion Brasovan, who lives in Florida – for winning an Eagle Scout award.

"I ran outside and made my husband stop the lawn trimmer so I could show him, and we had a good laugh," Lambert says. Then she called a brother, and they had another laugh.

Marie Lambert and other relatives worked to put together a memory book for their mother. They heard that if they wrote to the White House at least three months in advance, they'd receive a birthday greeting.

Area single parents invited to barn dance in Jerome

TWIN FALLS – Single parents are invited to meet other single parents Saturday and travel to Spanbauer's Barn in Jerome for entertainment.

Single parents will meet at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Center for New Directions on the College of Southern Idaho's campus. From there, they will carpool to Spanbauer's, which has a $5 cover charge.

For more information about this or other upcoming activities for single parents, call 736-0070.

Architect Marvel files appeal to federal grazing permit

HAILEY – Hailey architect Jon Marvel and his Idaho Watersheds Project have filed an appeal to a federal decision to permit grazing on a 15,000-acre section of the Humboldt National Forest in northern Nevada.

The area is 75 miles southwest of Twin Falls, near Jarbidge, Nev. Marvel contends the Forest Service allows too many cattle to graze, degrading a watershed that flows into the Bruneau River.

The appeal was filed with the Forest Service's regional office at Ogden, Utah. It will halt the issuance of a 10-year permit until a review, which usually takes 90 days.

CNN will broadcast film on men who swam for salmon

TWIN FALLS – A documentary film on four men who swam the Salmon River to dramatize the plight of Idaho's endangered chinook salmon will be broadcast this Sunday on the Cable News Network.

The documentary will be featured on CNN's "Earthwatch" program at 1 p.m.

Among the four swimmers were two local men, Gail Ater of Gooding and Roy Akins of Jerome. They, along with two Boise men, swam the Salmon this summer from a spot near Redfish Lake to the river's confluence with the Snake River; from there, they swam down the Snake to Lower Granite Dam in Washington.

With at least one swimmer in the water at all times, the group covered the 450-mile distance in less than a month.

Arts advocate Kinney, 71, dies

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Mary Jane Kinney was committed to the arts.

Kinney, who died Tuesday night at age 71 of a pulmonary embolism, never wavered in her commitment – even during times when it became unfashionable for government agencies to support arts endeavors. She served eight years on the Idaho Commission on the Arts and earned high marks from Gov. Cecil Andrus and Gov. Philip Batt for her efforts.

"My mother was a fine musician, and we had music in our home as long as I can remember," Kinney once wrote. "On any of our trips out of state, our family visited every gallery and museum we could and attended concerts and operas."

Born in Filer in 1924, Kinney was valedictorian at Twin Falls High School. She graduated Magna Cum Laude from Washington's Whitman College, with a degree in English literature, and went on to study at Stanford University and Idaho State University. For a while, she taught school in Dayton, Wash. Then she married Twin Falls native Jim Kinney and settled in to raise a family.

As a young woman, she began her crusade to bring more arts to southern Idaho.

Kinney became a charter member of the Magic Valley Symphony League and the Twin Falls Music Club, and she worked her way up to president of the Magic Valley Community Concerts Association. She became a lifetime member of the National Federation of Music Clubs. In 1969, she served on the committee that brought the Joffrey Ballet to Twin Falls.

"I drove her around," recalled husband Jim Kinney, who, himself, was once chairman of the Fine Arts Advisory Committee for the College of Southern Idaho.

Gov. Cecil Andrus singled out Mary Jane Kinney in 1987 and appointed her to the arts commission. True to form, she served "two terms plus a little extra," until March 1995.

"I think Mary Jane Kinney always looked out for the little guy, for the people in rural Idaho," said Margot Knight, arts commission spokesperson in Boise. "She was so proud to see cultural growth in towns like Twin Falls, but she was also proud of her association with big organizations. Her heart was in both worlds."

Ruth Turner, immediate past president of the Magic Valley Arts Council, agreed.

"Mary Jane was so supportive of local arts groups and was extremely generous with monetary contributions, as well as supportive of people's artistic endeavors," Turner said. "She was very outgoing and enthusiastic, but also a very common-sense kind of person."

Kinney first started work on the Twin Falls Public Library Board in 1969. She went on to become a charter member of the library's foundation and to be named Trustee of the Year by the Idaho Library Association. She Area students contemplate careers

By Virginia S. Garber
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Botanists, bakers and precision part makers all became teachers for a day during Twin Falls High School's Career Day Wednesday.

Sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, the event gathered members of more than 60 professions to speak to students in half-hour sessions about the jobs and salaries in fields ranging from paperhanging to nuclear physics.

All but two of the presenters were from the Magic Valley, according to Brent Jussel, who helped lead the Chamber's two-year planning process for Career Day. The Idaho National Engineering Laboratory sent a physicist and a chemist to round out the career session offerings requested earlier on a student survey.

Potential funeral directors heard from White Mortuary's Lewis Lenker what to do about bone chips after a cremation. Lenker brought along a child-sized casket to demonstrate some of his duties.

Twin Falls veterinarian Pat Saras had more elaborate visual aids – a labrador retriever recovering from lung surgery, the removed lung tissue and X-rays of the patient's health history. The would-be veterinarians in her session diagnosed another of the dog's problems – extra bone deposits around the legs.

Veterinary medicine can take you anywhere in the world, she told them. But first, Saras said, "take all the biology you can

City Hall wants you

Candidates for open council, mayor seats can sign up today

By Virginia S. Garber
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – A crop of City Hall jobs will be up for grabs in the Magic Valley on Nov. 7, and today marks the start of the race to the municipal ballot.

Beginning today, city council candidates and would-be mayors can file their petitions of candidacy with city clerks. The deadline for filing is 5 p.m. on Oct. 10.

Each petition must have the signatures of a certain number of registered voters from that city who support the candidate.

One voter's signature is required for every 100 people in the city's population, with a minimum requirement of three, said Matt Hanzel, a senior staff associate with the Association of Idaho Cities. Candidates must not turn in more than 40 signatures.

Mayor and City Council candidates must be U.S. citizens who are registered voters and residents of that city for at least 30 days prior to Nov. 7.

Voters in municipal elections must be U.S. citizens at least 18 years old and city residents for at least 30 days prior to the election.

Around the Magic Valley, the Nov. 7 elections will include these city jobs:

Twin Falls voters will elect four council members for numbered four-year seats currently held by Mayor Gale Kleinkopf, Vice Mayor Art Frantz, Tom Condie and Howard Allen. The city requires 40 signatures. In Twin Falls, council members choose the mayor and vice mayor.

In Acequia, the positions of council members Alvin Castro and Shirley Jenson are up for election. Their seats are four-year terms.

In Albion, three of the four council seats will be up for grabs. Two are currently filled by Jim Kell and Lynda Anderson, and the third was left vacant by the resignation of Alan Sorensen. All three are four-year terms. In Albion, candidates must gather five signatures.

Buhl will have two four-year council seats up for election, currently filled by Marie Maier and Dean Gillett. Buhl requires 36 signatures.

In Burley, the seats of Councilmen Brent Kerbs and Derlin Taylor are up for election, and a third council seat, vacant since the resignation of John Christian, will be filled as well. All are four-year terms. Burley requires 40 signatures.

Castleford voters will elect three people for seats now held by Mayor Mary Pinkston and council members Lynn Crowley and Stacy Griffith. Griffith's seat is a two-year term, and the others are four-year positions. Three signatures are required.

The Declo ballot will include three four-year positions now held by Mayor Jay Darrington and council members Lawrence Gillette and Mark Payne. Three signatures are required.

Eden voters will elect two people for the four-year positions now held by Mayor Melvin Rife and Councilman Larry Craig. Four signatures are required.

Filer voters will elect three council members to fill four-year positions now held by Jack Hart and Wanda Shaffer and a two-year position held by Gary Deitrick. Filer requires 16 signatures.

Glenns Ferry voters will choose people for two council positions now held by Dora Mae "Rocky" Sellers and Jim Phillips. Each council member serves a four-year term.

Two board positions for the King Hill Irrigation District will also be on the Glenns Ferry ballot. The seats of Rodney Warner and George Withers are up for election. The deadline for filing is Friday.

In Gooding, positions now held by Mayor David Adair and council members Isabelle Cahoon and Robert Reed will be up for election. All are four-year terms. Gooding requires 30 signatures.

In Hagerman, the four-year seats now occupied by Mayor

Horses replace wheelchairs for Access 90s weekend

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

TUTTLE – Dozens of draft horses, wagons and gentle saddle horses will arrive at the Malad Gorge State Park Friday afternoon for the sixth annual Access 90s Trail Ride weekend.

Also arriving will be more than 100 physically and mentally handicapped children and adults.

The goal of Access 90s is to give riding opportunities to people who have no horses of their own, said Terry Fletcher of the Sawtooth National Forest, which along with the state Parks and Recreation Department is helping with the event.

Though the event is geared for the handicapped, everyone is welcome to attend and take a horse or wagon ride, he said.

Volunteers will take people on free rides around the park most of the day on Saturday and Sunday. The National Guard will serve three meals a day and there will be live entertainment around the evening campfire.

The 652-acre Malad Gorge park, located off Interstate 84 south of Bliss, is a good place for Access 90s because it is easy to get to and has plenty of room for such a large group, park manager Kevin Lynott said this week. Trails for riding are scenic but level and easy. Wagons will make loops throughout the park and a nearby wildlife pond has been stocked with trout for fishing.

"We're really excited about it," Lynott said. "We think this is a great event."

Event organizer Nancy Taylor of Melba said the Access 90s Trail Ride is made possible by a large network of volunteers and by generous community donations that cover the annual cost of more than $3,000.

Taylor, who spent nine years in a wheelchair in a battle with multiple sclerosis, said she started Access 90s to give disabled people new avenues to enjoy the outdoors.

In 1989, she organized the first Access 90s trail ride in the Burley Ranger District with only a handful of riders. In 1990, the event, held in the South Hills, was bigger, with the return group plus new riders.

Taylor took her Access 90s to Big Smoky north of Fairfield in 1991, to Cove Creek near Ketchum in 1992, to Pettit Lake near Stanley in 1993 and to Bear Gulch in the South Hills in 1994. Each year, both support and attendance have grown. Last year, Access 90s drew more than 200 participants and volunteers.

As president of the Idaho Disabilities Coalition, Taylor has worked with the Forest Service to open public lands to handicapped people. The effort has helped build bathrooms that accommodate wheelchairs and ramps at campgrounds that let people in wheelchairs get onto horses.

"We wanted to show them that we didn't need special places, just places made more convenient," Taylor said. "You know, they never thought that a physically challenged person would like to ride a horse.

"You think of what an able-body person would like to do: hunt, fish, rock climb, go white water rafting, skydive, ski, you name it. We're people, too. We like to do that, too. We just have to do it differently."

Already Taylor is planning the 1996 and 1997 Access 90s rides. She said she hopes the support and growing participation continues.

"You take it for granted that you'll always be able to walk down that road," she said. "But someday, maybe you won't."

Bacteria found in wells bordering Idaho Falls

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Health officials fear an irrigation canal could be contaminating drinking water wells for some homeowners just outside Idaho Falls.

Water drawn from faucets at six homes along a half-mile stretch of road just south of the city has tested positive for potentially harmful bacteria.

Dan Wallace, public water coordinator for the District 7 Health Department, said Wednesday that officials believe the problem might stem from a canal running along the front of those homes. Work was done there last spring and the seal on the bottom of the canal was removed, Wallace said.

William Hampton, board chairman for the Idaho Irrigation District, which operates the canal, said he would work with the neighbors to fix any problems found.

"We'd be concerned about it, lets put it that way, and do what we could to help," Hampton said.

But Wallace said the problem for private well owners might be more widespread, so his office has encouraged other homeowners near canals to get their water tested.

Water from all six affected homes show total coliform bacteria contamination, and four also are contaminated by E-coli bacteria.

Twin Falls

Lee McRill

Lee McRill, formerly of Twin Falls, who later changed his name to Michael Kenneth Vernon, died Saturday, Sept. 23, 1995, in his North Portland, Ore., home from AIDS. Michael operated an Adult Foster Care Home for Alzheimer's patients in North Portland since 1989.

Vernon, the son of Martha and Gilbert McRill of Twin Falls, was born here on March 17, 1947. He was active in the Twin Falls Children's Theater and with his high school chorus and Madrigal singers. He graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1965. His love of theater continued throughout his life and he was involved in community theater groups in Idaho, Oregon and Washington, D.C., where he worked for the Kennedy Center.

Michael was one of the leading spokesperson's for passage of Measure 16, Oregon's assisted suicide law. As his disease progressed, he sought the right to have a choice in the manner and timing of his death. In August, he filed a motion in the Federal District Court in Eugene for relief from an injunction placed upon Measure 16. Two days later, the judge declared Measure 16 unconstitutional and denied him this right. Recently, his appeal to the Ninth Circuit Court in San Francisco for relief from the injunction was also denied.

Vernon was deeply involved in the North Portland community. He was a charter member of both the Kenton and Portsmouth Neighborhood Associations and served many years as a board member. He was instrumental in creating a resolution declaring the neighborhood one of Oregon's first AIDS Compassionate Zones. He was one of the original community representatives on the North Portland Enhancement Committee. This committee routed funds generated from the landfill back into community projects, such as the tree plantings on Columbia Boulevard and North Greely and the Penninsular Children's Center.

He helped found the Friends of Columbia Park, putting together their bylaws and appearing in court to fight against construction of a parking lot there. He served as director of the North Portland Citizens Committee and instigated the ongoing lawsuit against board misuse. He also served on the North Portland Odor Abatement Committee.

Ever since Michael was diagnosed with AIDS in 1991, he continued to maintain a commitment to live fully and for as long as possible. His generosity and courage will be remembered by all who knew him.

Michael is survived by his parents, Martha and Gilbert McRill of Twin Falls; and his three sisters, Phyllis Stellings of Idaho Falls, Mary Lou Nosco of Des Moines, Iowa, and Ann McRill of Seattle, Wash.

No memorial services are planned at this time. His family and friends will gather later in Hagerman Valley for a memorial.

Those who wish to honor Michael may make a contribution to the Cascade AIDS Project, 620 S.W. Fifth, Suite 300, Portland, Ore. 97204 in his name.

Tom E. Hackett

Tom E. Hackett, 82, of Twin Falls, died Monday, Sept. 25, 1995, at his home.

Tom was born March 2, 1913, in New Haven, Conn., the son of Thomas and Anne Whalen Hackett. He grew up and attended schools in New Haven and also attended Penn State University. Tom married Virginia Cassidy in 1945, and they moved to the Twin Falls area in 1953, where Tom worked for Asgrow Research for many years, retiring in 1978.

He was a member of the Knights of Columbus and also of St. Edwards Catholic Church, serving as an usher for 40 years.

Tom is survived by his wife, Virginia of Twin Falls; and nine children, Nancy (Paul) Zimmerman of Denver, Colo., Greg (Barbara) Hackett of South Woodstock, Conn., Patty Hackett of Springerville, Ark., Kevin (Cary) Hackett of Colorado Springs, Colo., Anne (Paul) Niemsyk of Boise, Tracy (Tod) Blakeman of Boise, B.J. (Marilyn) Hackett of Boise, Rob Hackett of Twin Falls and Sean (Melissa) Hackett of Pocatello. Tom is also survived by one brother, Frank Hackett of North Haven, Conn., a sister, Mary Hackett of Hartford, Conn.; and 13 grandchildren.

A private memorial service was held at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls. A public memorial Mass will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 14, 1995, at St. Edward's Catholic Church in Twin Falls. Cremation preceded services under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

Jerome

Aasne Kittelson

Aasne Kittelson, 92, of Jerome, died Tuesday, Sept. 26, 1995, at St. Benedict's Long Term Care Unit in Jerome.

She was born Nov. 22, 1902, in Bottineau, N.D., the daughter of Olaf and Engberg Brekke Haugo. Aasne married Lewis Kittelson on Dec. 22, 1922, in Deloraine, Manetoba Canada. They lived on a farm north of Bottineau for many years. Her husband died in May of 1970. She continued living on the family farm with her son. In 1989, she moved to Idaho to live with her daughter and son-in-law for health reasons.

Aasne was a member of the Women's Circle, Matlgashe Lutheran Church and St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Jerome.

She is survived by her daughter and son in law, Helen (Herbert) Renn of Jerome; her son, Arnold Kittelson of Bottineau, N.D.; one sister, Ema Ellis of Winnipeg, Canada; 15 grandchildren; 21 great-grandchildren; and 10 great-great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her parents, husband, two daughters and a grandson.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday at St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Jerome, with the Rev. Baldwin Camin officiating.

Burial will follow at the Jerome Cemetery. Friends may call from 5 to 8 p.m. Friday at the Hovee-Hagertson Funeral Chapel in Jerome.

Idaho court justices rule drug user eligible for jobless benefits

BOISE (AP) — A sharply divided Idaho Supreme Court says a lumber company must pay jobless benefits to a worker fired after a drug test showed he used marijuana on his day off.

In a 3-2 decision released Wednesday, the court majority said Steven R. Merriott was entitled to unemployment pay from Shearer Lumber Products. The court, in a decision written by Chief Justice Charles McDevitt, upheld lower rulings that there was no evidence that Merriott was under the influence of drugs or alcohol while at work.

Therefore he could not be fired for employment-related misconduct, the majority said.

Shearer's drug policy did not specifically forbid employees from using drugs on their days off, the court said.

Justices Cathy Silak and Gerald Schroeder wrote separate dissents, with Schroeder scolding the majority for reaching an illogical conclusion. Schroeder said possession of marijuana is a crime in Idaho. Therefore, Merriott didn't have to be told specifically by the company that using marijuana during non-working hours would violate the drug policy.

"The criminal laws of Idaho say that a person shall not smoke marijuana," he said. "The fact that the smoking occurred on non-work hours is irrelevant because the active ingredient of the substance was still in Merriott's body during work hours."

Schroeder said Merriott was a heavy equipment operator.

"One must ask the question: Could any reasonable employer send an employee out to operate heavy equipment knowing the employee had the active ingredient of marijuana in his system? The answer is, no," he said.

Schroeder said Merriott committed a crime, then showed up for work with the active ingredient resulting from that crime in his system. He lost his job, but now gets money from his employer.

"His employer attempted to act responsibly in establishing a drug policy and enforcing it," the judge said.

"Funds from that employer now go into Merriott's pocket with the assistance of the state.

"The business that did the right thing pays. The employee that did the wrong thing receives," he said.

Silak said the employer could define "under the influence of any chemical substance or alcohol during working hours" as the equivalent to testing positive on a drug test administered during working hours.

"As an employer, Shearer could make the decision that impairment consisted not of physical signs or symptoms, but rather testing positive on a drug test administered during working hours," she said.

Shearer has facilities in Elk City and Grangeville.

Managers eye future at INEL

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The INEL's new managers knew when they took over last year that only cleaning up waste left from decades of nuclear missions would mean working themselves out of a job in about 15 years.

So Lockheed Martin Idaho Technologies Co. has developed a strategic plan it hopes will gradually draw new business to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory while the cleanup continues.

The plan will put scientists to work on a wide range of projects from robotics and nuclear cleanup to the accurate testing of butterfat content in cheese.

The cleanup gives managers time to transform the site into the premier government laboratory applying engineering technology to Energy Department and private industry uses, Lockheed Martin Idaho President John Denson said.

"What we want to be is the laboratory that takes the prototypes and develops them into real products that the Department of Energy can use, or that can spin out into the marketplace," Denson said.

He has been speaking to groups of site employees this month to explain Lockheed Martin Idaho's vision for the INEL, and how the company intends to make new work once cleanup funding disappears.

Although the plan as outlined is more conceptual than specific, one technology officials hope will be typical of the INEL's future relationship with private enterprise is industrial and agricultural sensing.

For example, Denson said, site scientists are working with a company to develop a sensor that detects butterfat content in cheese, which controls whether the cheese becomes cheddar, colby or another variety.

If that proves commercially viable, Lockheed Martin Idaho would insist on local production.

And while the INEL will continue to be a government lab, Denson said, he expects to increase research partnerships with industry — already up to more than $40 million this year — to ensure the site's future usefulness.

"All of this is going to grow over time," he said. "I don't see any huge bonanzas popping up in the next 15 years."

But the idea is to have the INEL clean in 15 years and to find alternate work for the cleanup employees either at the site or in private businesses in the region.

Energy Department officials say Lockheed's 15-year plan draws on the skills available at the INEL and gives the site a reasonable shot at growing into new niches.

"This is why we hired Lockheed, quite frankly," spokesman Brad Bugger said.

"We recognized that the environmental mission was going to go away sooner or later."

Evidence implicates 'happy face killer'

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Wyoming authorities are trying to determine whether a woman whose body was found in Nebraska was one of eight women a prisoner in Washington state said he killed.

The Laramie County Sheriff's Department on Wednesday said it had launched an investigation into the death of an unidentified woman believed to have been killed in eastern Laramie County early this year.

In a release, the department said the Nebraska Highway Patrol on Tuesday discovered the remains during a search along Interstate 80 near Lexington, Neb. The search was prompted by information authorities obtained from Keith Jesperson, who was being held in Vancouver, Wash., awaiting a murder trial, the release said.

Jesperson, 40, an interstate trucker, has claimed in handwritten letters decorated with "happy faces" distributed to news outlets that he killed eight women in five states.

In at least one case, in Portland, Ore., Jesperson said innocent people are serving life sentences for his crime.

He is being held at the Clark County, Wash., jail on charges he kidnapped, raped and strangled a woman in March. He began his letter-writing campaign from jail two weeks ago.

Jesperson

"I want this to end as soon as possible," he said in one letter. "I do not want this to drag on."

Laramie County detectives said the victim, possibly from Spokane, Wash., was white, in her 20s, and had a green tattoo on her ankle. The release said authorities believed her parents live in Fort Collins, Colo.

Sheriff's Sgt. Terry Bohlig said an autopsy was scheduled Wednesday afternoon.

Jesperson's letters have described deaths in Oregon, Washington, California, Wyoming and Florida.

He has pleaded innocent to the slaying of Julie Ann Winningham, 41, of Camas, Wash., although police say he had confessed. His lawyer, Thomas Phelan, refused to comment on the plea or the confession. The trial was scheduled for Oct. 30.

Jesperson has not been charged in any other crimes described in the letters.

Nevada dodges severe fire summer; season not over yet

RENO, Nev. (AP) — This summer's wildland fires blackened half the acreage consumed a year earlier in Nevada and, unlike 1994, left homes untouched. But a fire official says the arrival of fall does mean the danger is over.

"You're not really out of the woods until you have snow on the ground," Sierra Front Wildfire Cooperators Coordinator Steve Frady said on Wednesday. "As long as you have the extremely high amount of dead vegetation, you still have fuel to burn."

Frady said cooler temperatures at night and higher humidities would help firefighters if any blazes break out, but daytime readings remain warm while humidities fall and winds pick up.

"We need consistent high humidity, low temperatures and rainfall — lots of rainfall. Until we get those kinds of conditions, we can't really get out of the fire season," he said.

Still, the 111,766 acres burned in major fires across Nevada this year pales in comparison to last year's 215,669 acres and no homes were lost in 1995, although flames consumed a few outbuildings and the historic Tobar railroad depot in Elko County.

"We were really lucky this year. I think we've had fires in all the jurisdictions that have had a real potential for spread, but we had good conditions or fair conditions and pretty fast responses. It was not anything close to what we experienced last year."

In 1994, Frady said extreme conditions created extreme fire behavior.

"Very high temperatures, very dry conditions, very dry vegetation, high winds — all the things that can go wrong were present last year."

He said the wet winter helped this summer's fire crews by keeping the higher elevations snow covered later into the spring and by tamping down last fall's grass into a mat that burned more slowly than standing grass.

On the down side, the soggy spring produced a bumper crop of grasses that dried into tinder just waiting for a spark, often in the middle of nowhere.

"When lightning hit, it hit in remote area and crews didn't have the luxury of such a rapid response as we do in this area, so those fires had a chance to run a little bit," Frady said.

"Still, they were held to some relatively small acreages. You compare some the fires last year to the ones this year and there just isn't any comparison."

Church counseling service faces financial difficulties

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — One of the region's largest mental health clinics accepting low-income patients is facing financial problems.

Demand for Christian Counseling Services' help has jumped over the last three years as the state has cut services for low-income people with mental health problems.

The agency is committed to providing counseling to anyone, regardless of religious beliefs or ability to pay. It started in 1982 as Lutheran Family Service.

In 1984, a coalition of nine Protestant congregations assumed responsibility for the center. It gets less than 10 percent of its $220,000 budget from the United Way and other grants.

There are few mental health services for people who can't pay. The center's counselors don't want to send people away because they don't know where they would turn for help.

Kids born out of wedlock need to know

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter from "Concerned Grandfather," who questioned whether to tell a child born out of wedlock that he had "no father." Thank you for your wonderful answer!

At 31, I had a child out of wedlock. His father was separated from his wife when we met. I didn't want to get married just because I was pregnant. Before our son, "Jimmy," was born, the man returned to his wife, and I struggled for years about what to tell Jimmy about his father.

As Jimmy grew older, my concern shifted from what to say about his dad to what to say about the fact that he had a half-sister attending his school. I had always known, but Jimmy (now 12) was beginning to have "girlfriends," and I was afraid that one of them could turn out to be his half-sister.

Finally one evening a few months ago, I sat down with Jimmy and explained everything. I was amazed at how well he accepted it.

My timing was fortunate. Within a week, the little girl told Jimmy that her mother had told her. It could have been a disaster had he learned this from the girl rather than from me.

Jimmy now knows who his father is. He has expressed a desire to meet him, and I am sure one day he will. Frankly, the way I look at it, his father has suffered a great loss in not getting to know his son – a sensitive, smart and likable child.

Telling children the truth, whatever it may be, helps build their faith in us. If we handle problems well, our kids will learn to handle problems, too.

Please sign me ...

RELIEVED

DEAR RELIEVED: My sentiments exactly. Both children are richer for the knowledge that you two wise adults chose to share. I always advise parents to be completely honest with their children, as soon as they are able to understand.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can use another story about returning a found wallet.

It was near Christmas, and I was 18 and attending junior college. After finally finding a parking space, I grabbed my books and hurried to class. I am usually so preoccupied, a 747 could land on my head and I wouldn't notice, but suddenly, there on the pavement, I spotted a man's wallet!

I looked inside and found plenty of identification along with $100 in cash. I admit I thought about what I could buy for $100, but I dropped it off at the administration desk along with my name and address.

The following Saturday, I was sound asleep when the doorbell rang. My mom answered it, and came into my bedroom carrying a dozen beautiful red roses. The card with the flowers read, "Thank you for restoring my faith in humanity."

I was so moved, I cried. Abby, I kept those roses until they fell apart. I still have that card — which means more to me than anything I could have bought for $100.

– CYNTHIA RUPP, LAKE ELSINORE, CALIF.

DEAR CYNTHIA: Thank you for sharing your "honesty is the best policy" message. The gentleman whose wallet you found certainly knows how to please a lady.

Jaycees seek some nominations for outstanding young citizens

The Times-News

BLACKFOOT – The Idaho Junior Chamber of Commerce is seeking nominations for its first "Five Outstanding Young Idahoans" ceremony, planned for Feb. 17, 1996, and hosted by the Blackfoot Jaycees.

Young men and women from all fields of endeavor will be honored at the ceremony. Winners will be selected on the basis of achievement or contribution in such areas as personal or social improvement; financial success; voluntary service; political, scientific or legal contributions; and academic, athletic or religious leadership.

Nominees must be between the ages of 21 and 39, inclusive. Nominations will be accepted from any person, group or organization. For more information or to obtain a nomination form, call Renae Jackson at (208) 785-4064 or Shelley Krehbiel at (208) 785-2135.

Junior Chamber of Commerce is a young people's leadership training organization for ages 21-39. It offers personal growth through community service. Currently, 21 jaycee chapters are located throughout Idaho.

Alzheimer's care translates into inventions

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Ruby Greathouse spent many sleepless nights during the eight years she cared for her father, who had Alzheimer's disease, until her brother came to the rescue.

"When you don't get a healthy night's sleep, you get tired, you get stressed and you get short-fused. E. Eventually, I yelled for help," Ms. Greathouse said.

"The day she called for help, I heard her," Phil Greathouse said.

After a few days of tinkering in the garage, Greathouse came up with the Caregiver's Helper, an electronic monitor in the form of ½-inch-thick pads that can be used in a bed or on a chair.

The pads connect to a transmitter that sends a radio signal to a portable receiver slighter bigger than a beeper. With a 200-foot range, the receiver signals the caregiver when a patient gets out of the bed or a chair.

"The first night we tried it, the alarm went off at 1:30 a.m., and sure enough, he was off the bed," Ms. Greathouse said. "I took him to the bathroom and put him back to bed."

The model has been improved in the three years since Greathouse first put it together. The latest model, at $474, is battery-operated, and the batteries can be checked for cell life.

About 4 million people suffer from Alzheimer's, a degenerative disease of nerve cells that leads to brain atrophy and senile dementia for which there is no cure. The disease usually affects older people, but it has been found in people as young as 28.

More than 70 percent of Alzheimer's patients are cared for at home, meaning family members must deal with symptoms such as memory loss, confusion, irritability, disorientation, impaired judgment and concentration and, perhaps worst of all, the restless wandering.

The Alzheimer's Association, based in Chicago, considers wandering a potentially dangerous problem and has a national program to help keep track of wanderers, said Thomas Kirk, vice president of patient and family services.

Ms. Greathouse said she and her stepmother were primarily responsible for her father before he died in July 1993 at 83. Checking the mailbox, shoveling snow outside, or even caring for animals was difficult because her father had to be constantly within sight or he would wander off.

Greathouse noticed his sister's bleary eyes and jitteriness. Every little sound in the middle of the night such as the furnace kicking in, the house creaking, the cat or just her imagination would awaken her and prompt her to check on her father.

Greathouse said he had no electronics training, just a curiosity about how devices worked. At 13, he took apart television sets. Later, he opened a television and radio repair shop before joining the Marines. His last job was at steel mill before a motorcycle accident 12 years ago rendered his left arm useless.

"Essentially, we didn't know what kind of devices existed out there. We saw a problem for ourselves and took care of it ourselves," Ms. Greathouse said. "Dad had some talent for mechanics, and I think Phil inherited that."

Many hospitals and care homes use more expensive, sophisticated systems such as monitoring patients' rooms through nursing stations, tracking patients wearing wrist bands or simple door alarms that detect motion.

A range of devices also is available for private care.

Robb Ruyle, president of Powder Industries Inc. of Montrose, Colo., said his company makes bed and seat monitors, both of which have some form of restraints. The company, which sells the products for about $135, has been making devices for home health care since 1982.

Magic Valley med center displays antique clothing

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS – The Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's new obstetrics wing will celebrate its opening in January 1996 by mounting permanent displays of antique infant clothing. The clothing will decorate the newly remodeled unit in shadow display boxes.

According to Denise Mayes, director of Maternal Child Nursing, the displays provide an opportunity to contrast the old with the new. She said the items will be permanently housed in the hospital and will allow the public to be a part of the new unit.

Clothing in good condition may be left at the Maternal Child Nursing Office, located on the fourth floor of the MVRMC. Items will not be returned but may be considered tax deductible donations.

Job Service representative is available to aid local veterans

The Times-News

Roy Applewhite, a Job Service representative, will be available at several Magic Valley area locations to assist veterans.

Services include work registration; job referrals; veterans' education, training and other programs; vocational guidance; and referrals to community-based organizations.

Veterans are encouraged to contact Applewhite at any of the above locations or at the Twin Falls Job Service Office, 260 Fourth Ave. N. For more information, call 736-3000.

Workshop covers communication

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS – A communications workshop is planned for 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at the Center for New Directions on the College of Southern Idaho campus.

"(Mis)Communicating with Others" will explore communications issues that can prevent men and women from meeting their personal or professional goals.

Do you find yourself arguing with your spouse over little things blown out of proportion? Do you have misunderstandings at work because of a lack of communication? Do you feel as if your needs aren't being met because you don't know how to express them? People who can answer "yes" to any of these questions or who would like their communication skills enhanced are encouraged to sign up for the workshop.

Cost is $20, which includes lunch. Deadline to register is Friday. For more information or to register, call 733-9554, Ext. 2860, or 736-0070.

HOW CAN YOU TELL IF YOUR TEEN NEEDS HELP?

Sometimes it is hard for parents to tell if their teenager's behavior is part of a normal phase of development or if it is a warning signs of emotional or psychological problems, or involvement with alcohol or drugs.

___ Sudden drop in school grades
___ Loss of interests in normal activities
___ Truancy/Absenteeism
___ Changes in eating and sleeping habits
___ Dropping favorite school activity
___ Becoming withdrawn/non-communicative
___ Marked personality changes
___ Talk of death/suicide
___ Angry outbursts
___ Difficulty in concentrating
___ Crying spells
___ Disciplinary problems
___ Memory problems
___ Change of friends
___ Threats toward self/others
___ Giving away possessions

If you have ticked some of these signs in one of your teens or are concerned about other behaviors, you will be able to have your teen evaluated by a mental health professional. Assessments are provided immediately to respond to emergencies or appointments can be scheduled for each teen through Canyon View Hospital and Counseling Centers.

Appointments for a free, confidential assessment will be available at any of these locations:

Meridian bond issue to add schools fails

BOISE — The Meridian School District is buckling down for more crowded conditions for several years with the defeat of a $14.7 million bond issue to build new schools.

After a campaign that drew little opposition and touted the schools could be built without a tax increase, parent leaders of the bond effort were optimistic about Tuesday's election.

But Idaho's two-thirds majority proved too much. The issue collected only 64.5 percent of the vote, about 2 percentage points shy of passage.

It was the district's last hope of adding more space in time for the 1996-97 school year.

Boat hits Navy barge in Pend Oreille

The barge is owned by the Navy's research center at Bayview. It does sonar tests on submarines and often has a barge anchored in the lake. Authorities were still investigating the accident and why the barge was out on the lake with no lights.

Kootenai County authorities said Brian Scoggin, 17, Spokane, was piloting the houseboat to shore Sunday night. Scoggin did not see the Navy barge in the middle of the lake and hit it about 11:15 p.m.

The boat partially sank, in a portion of the lake that is 1,000 feet deep, before it was secured to the barge. None of the three passengers on the boat was injured. The boat is owned by Scoggins' father.

Coalition to challenge grass growers

SANDPOINT — The Clean Air Coalition in northern Idaho plans to challenge state law which exempts grass growers from lawsuits for nuisance damages by people downwind of the smoke, a Coeur d'Alene attorney says.

The so-called "Right to Farm" provision, passed 10 years ago, is unique to grass growers and prevents those who are harmed by smoke from annual field burning from suing for damages, Charles Sheroke said.

"This is a major pursuit. There are probably four or five different avenues that can be utilized," he said.

SANDPOINT — Residents of Derr Island at Lake Pend Oreille feared a proposed sewage lagoon would ultimately ruin the water quality and their well-being.

But Clark Fork contractor Jim White Tuesday scratched his conditional-use application to build it, ending a three-year battle with his neighbors and the Clark Fork-Pend Oreille Coalition environmental group.

"I think the property developers have just begun to realize the dimensions of that opposition," said Derr Island resident David Lisaius.

White, who first began building the lagoon in 1992 on the small marshy island in the mouth of the Clark Fork River, refused to comment about his reasons or whether he would pursue the project later.

Letters are trickling into city and county offices: If the Foothills Plan is approved in its current form, they want authorities to pay them what their homes are worth.

The Boise City Council soon will begin examining the plan, which would allow some 10,000 homes over 59,000 acres. Ada County commissioners also will have their say.

Animal raid compared to Waco

LAVA HOT SPRINGS (AP) — The owners of an exotic animal farm where 18 lions were shot after some of them escaped last week have likened the shootings to the FBI raid on the Branch Davidians at Waco.

"They went in and killed the lions to save them," said Dotti Martin, who owns the lions and wolves of Ligertown with her husband, Robert Fieber.

A neighbor alerted the Bannock County sheriff's office after he saw a female lion stalking his animals Wednesday night. He shot that lion, and sheriff's deputies shot the others because of the threat to this small tourist community. A nearby elementary school had to be shut down.

"They're murderers, and they ought to be hung," Fieber told the Deseret News, which reported the comments in a copyrighted story Wednesday.

"We are terrorized because we have exotic animals. We've been given the finger by neighbors, harassed, you name it," Fieber said. "I'm totally fed up. I'm so damn bitter. This is the United States of America, not Nazi Germany."

Fieber believes the killing should have ended after three lions were dead: the one at the neighbor's, another that attacked him and Martin when they arrived home and a third shortly after the second.

Instead, 18 of the Ligertown — which gets its name from the breeding of lions and tigers — cats were killed. Over the weekend, 27 were taken to a reserve in California. Dozens of wolf-dog hybrids, certified as dogs, were taken to Idaho Falls.

U.S. Humane Society officials called the compound, which was littered with feces, bones and other debris, inhumane. The cages were shabbily put together and insecure, they said.

Fieber and Martin went to the hospital after the attack Wednesday night, and when they returned, their compound was surrounded by deputies who would not allow them to enter the property.

By Tuesday, they had not yet been allowed to return.

— Robert Fieber, animal owner, to the Deseret News

Fieber and Martin are staying with friends in the nearby town of McCammon, Idaho. They depend on donations for clothing, food and rides to the hospital three times a day. Fieber said this ordeal is killing him.

"I was never allowed to see which animals were dead," he said, tears welling in his eyes. "I was never allowed any due process of law. Why do we have the Constitution? People better start worrying."

Authorities said Martin and Fieber refused to tell them how many lions, tigers and ligers were inside Ligertown to begin with.

But the couple said they pleaded to be allowed to help and were told "to stay away or we'd be arrested or worse," Fieber said. They also insist the cats were not vicious.

Martin calls the couple's three ligers, "her girls — the sweetest girls. She knows the animals' birthdays, their personalities, their histories. She has cared for them, even slept with them, since birth.

"We realize the place was a housekeeping disaster, but the animals were well fed, and (cleaning) help was on the way," Martin said. Earlier this month, they had contacted several people in Utah who were willing to bring building and cleaning materials to the rundown facility.

Group plans campaign to ban dog racing

POST FALLS (AP) — Animal lovers horrified by stories of abuse at the Coeur d'Alene Greyhound Park plan to pressure the state Legislature to outlaw dog racing.

At a meeting Tuesday night, 50 people along with four national animal-rights groups decided they would conduct a letter-writing campaign to Gov. Phil Batt and legislators seeking a dog-racing prohibition.

"It will help end cruelty to animals by ending the state's sanction of a particularly heinous form of exploitation," the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals wrote in a letter to Batt.

The Legislature legalized racing in 1987 and the Post Falls track opened a year later. It is currently owned by Paul Bryant Jr. of Tuscaloosa, Ala., and United Tote Co. of Montana.

A state Department of Law Enforcement investigation last summer confirmed a case of dog abuse involving one trainer, who has since been barred from the track. But several other allegations went nowhere because they could not be proved, investigators said.

The governor found the investigation insufficient, said his press secretary, Amy Kleiner. He is contacting members of the state Racing Commission to find out what they knew about the conditions at the park.

Rollin Putzier, who helped organize Tuesday's rally, and others contend that the state Racing Commission has not been responsive to complaints.

"Abuse is not new at Coeur d'Alene Greyhound Park," said former trainer Florine Caldwell. "It happened five years ago. It's happening now. It needs to be stopped."

Caldwell, 25, who ran a kennel when the track first opened, admitted pouring bleach and salt down her dogs' throats to make them vomit to lose weight before racing.

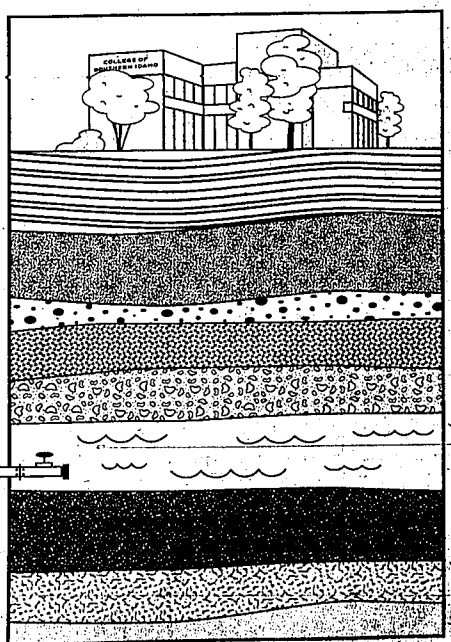

"I did things I thought I'd never do — just for the money," she said.

Track manager Al May was not immediately available for comment this morning.

In addition to PETA, the Progressive Animal Welfare Society, the Humane Society of the United States and In Defense of Animals are urging the state to shut down dog racing.

PULLING HEAT FROM A RENEWABLE RESOURCE 2,000 FEET BELOW GROUND TAKES EXPERTS - ENERGY EXPERTS.

When the folks at the College of Southern Idaho needed help with their geothermal heating system, they called Idaho Power. Our energy services analysts confirmed that adding booster pumps to the system would correct a loss of water pressure. Our partnership now helps the college continue to reap the benefits of renewable resources - reduced energy use and lower costs, with little environmental impact.

To find out how you can use energy wisely and save on your energy bill call your local Idaho Power energy expert. Whether it's tapping the earth's heat from 2,000 feet below ground or generating electricity from the sun, the energy experts will find the right solution for you.

Park Service may protect Bear River Massacre site

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Melinda Dunford and Allie Hansen embraced in a quiet southeastern Idaho meadow and wept over the unmarked graves of hundreds of Northwestern Shoshoni.

It was a moment of healing for Dunford, a descendant of one of the few survivors of the 1863 Bear River Massacre, and Hansen, a local historian whose ancestors were among the area's first white settlers.

"The tears just ran," Dunford recalls. "It was very humbling, very sacred to me, to know I was walking on the ground that ancestors had walked on, and their lives had been taken.

"The helplessness they must have felt," she says with emotion. "I am blessed ... I feel that reverence."

Dunford is not alone. Now, 132 years after Col. Patrick E. Connor's troops slaughtered as many as 400 Shoshoni — the largest single loss of Indian life in the Old West — the massacre site is being considered for incorporation under the aegis of the National Park Service.

The spot, about 100 miles northeast of Salt Lake City, was declared a National Historic Landmark five years ago, but that does not offer Park Service protection.

Though disturbed only by occasional visitors and grazing livestock, the 120 acres comprising the massacre grounds remain privately held.

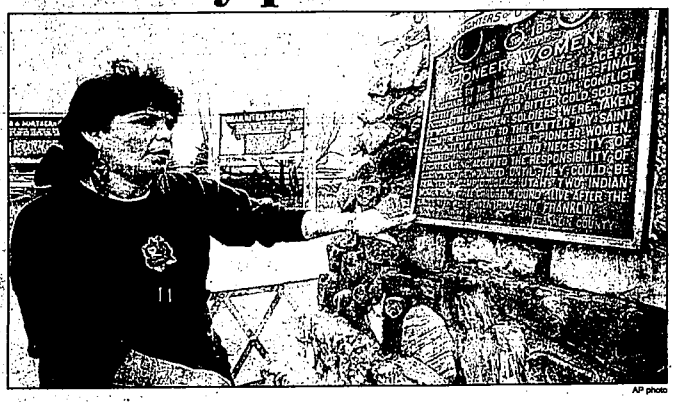

"We've been told that after the massacre, the bodies of our warriors and the rest of the people were just left on the field," said Tom Pacheco, vice chairman of the 350-member Northwestern Band of Shoshoni. "No. 1 is to leave the site undisturbed."

Brad Smith, chairman of the Franklin County Commission, said local white residents are generally sympathetic and supportive.

"You hate to be noted in your county as the site of something that tragic," he said. "But it happened, and proper knowledge of it should be taught."

A partnership of government, local residents and the tribe is the next logical step for protection of the site, said historian Edwin C. Bearss, who recommended the landmark designation.

"It is not a well-known site, such as merited by its historical significance," he said. "Wounded Knee or the Sand Creek massacre are much better known."

AP photo

Melinda Dunford, a Northwestern Shoshoni Indian, examines a plaque detailing the Bear River Massacre. Hundreds of unmarked graves lie near Preston, where 250 to 400 Shoshonis were killed by the U.S. Army.

However, not only were there more deaths at Bear River — the official count at Wounded Knee, S.D., in 1890 was 145 Lakota Sioux, while 130 Cheyenne died at Sand Creek, Colo., in 1864 — but Connor's attack set the pattern for frontier genocide.

"The ideal time to successfully campaign against (Indians) was the winter, and that seemed to characterize the Army's activities," said Bearss, now special military sites assistant to the Park Service director in Washington. "(The Army) could not compete with the Native Americans in their summer campaigns."

Dunford says members of the tribe, relying on accounts passed from generation to generation, have long known the truth about Bear River: that Connor's Jan. 29, 1863, assault was launched at dawn against her tribe's still-sleeping village.

Connor lost 14 of his 200 troops to what resistance Shoshoni warriors could offer. Afterward, by some accounts, soldiers roamed the camp looting, raping, and dashing infants to death on the frozen ground.

Cut off from escape on three sides by Connor's California Volunteers, women ran with their children into their sole avenue of escape, the ice-clogged Bear River. Among those fleeing was Anzee Chie, Dunford's great-great-grandmother.

"Her baby had started to cry, and she was hiding under the banks of the river with some other women," Dunford recalled. "She was afraid the child would let the soldiers know they were there — so she drowned her baby."

Connor later submitted a self-serving report of a pitched battle with well-armed, dug-in Indians. He was made a brigadier general by a grateful War Department.

Despite gunshots to the chest and shoulder, Anzee Chie recovered to have other children — and to tell them and their offspring about what really happened that bitterly cold morning.

Hansen, too, heard the stories. In 1860, her forebears had been sent by Mormon pioneer leader Brigham Young to what is now Franklin County, and settled within a stone's throw of the massacre site.

It was as chairwoman of the County Historical Committee that she first met Dunford during a late-summer meeting with Shoshoni representatives about the site.

For 10 years, Hansen had been telling the story of Anzee Chie, but she had not met one of her descendants. Dunford asked Hansen to take her on a tour of the site.

"She just looked and looked. You could see the emotion," Hansen remembered. "My hair was standing up. She looked at me, I looked at her; she put her head on my shoulder and just cried, and I did, too."

Dunford said the experience filled a spiritual void she felt both as an American Indian and as a Mormon.

"As I've walked in these hills, I've often felt their presence," she said. "I have a spiritual side of me that hungers to learn more about my people."

Study: Boise growth takes toll on wells

BOISE (AP) — The Boise area's phenomenal growth appears to be taxing a critical resource as the water table has dropped 10 feet or more in some areas over the past 25 years, a U.S. Geological Service study says.

"It's an indicator that we are starting to affect the water resources of this valley," said Jerry Hughes, the agency's Idaho chief.

"This study is long overdue," said Betty Bermensolo, a southwestern Ada County resident leading the opposition to a United Water Idaho pipeline used by Micron Technology that is pumping water from her neighborhood to southeastern Boise.

One well is pumping 2 million gallons of water a day and two others are under construction. Micron has chipped in about $7 million toward the pipeline system.

These three wells were approved without first having the info on how much impact 10 million gallons will have on our shallow wells," Bermensolo said.

The state Department of Water Resources and the service plan a comprehensive review of the region's groundwater.

Experts said the service finding is not cause for immediate alarm, because the drop-off was recorded in the "shallow aquifer," a 100- to 150-foot deep layer used mainly for rural wells.

Still, because the shallow and deep aquifers are linked, depletion of the upper level could be an early warning of future problems in the lower aquifer.

The service study, which compared well levels in August 1970 and October 1992, does not identify causes for the decline.

VOLCO'S METAL ROOFING
AND SIDING SALE AT TRUCKLOAD SAVINGS
ORDERS NOW BEING PLACED

• Wide Variety of Colors
• High Strength
• Distinctive Appearance
• High Trapezoidal Rib
• 24" Coverage

Metal roofing systems are a popular alternative to conventional roofing. Attractiveness, minimal maintenance, and superb weather protectiveness are just a few of the benefits of metal roofing. And Delta Rib has the added advantage of being an easy to instali panel with better than average load bearing capacity.

Available with a 20 year limited warranty in a wide array of polyester colors. 29 or 30 gauge Pro-Panel II promises both beauty and strength. The reduced flat area between the main ribs and the two intermediate stiffening ribs gives Pro-Panel II a built-in rigidity. A 36" coverage width means Pro-Panel II installs quicker and easier with fewer panels to apply.

LSD outlawed in '67 in California

Q. When did California outlaw LSD?

A. In 1967. Timothy Leary was 46, still advising everybody to "turn on, tune in, drop out." New Chevies were selling for $2,500, and bread for 25 cents a one-pound loaf.

A five-pound bean pot, typically, will hold enough beans to serve five bean eaters. A six-pounder, six bean eaters. A seven-pounder, seven bean eaters. You've got it.

Recent computer runs indicate 35 percent of the American households now have children, but 56 percent have dogs or cats or both.

Each female sea turtle of the olive ridley species lays about 100 eggs the size of table tennis balls. When 150,000 females so loaded waddle up one Costa Rican beach to nest, clearly they leave a huge next-generation crop. Yet only a relative few survive the egg-eaters to hatch and make it back into the water.

What's what?

True Italian pizza can't be more than 12 inches across, according to the Naples Pizza Association.

Something else baseball players do better than most, understandably, is judge velocity. They learn to recognize how fast something is moving. Still, they never get as good at it as hawks or housecats.

Caligula's ancient Roman government ran short of money so he proposed the state balance its budget by opening brothels staffed with the wives of nobles. Didn't go over.

The French started numbering their houses in 1463. Specifically, along the Pont Notre Dame in Paris. Visitors from England thought it a good notion, but it took them 250 years to adopt it.

Humphrey returns to his seat of power

LONDON (AP) — By day, he slept through more meetings of the British Cabinet than anyone else, and by night he slunk out of the prime minister's 10 Downing Street residence and, well, roamed around.

Then it seemed it was all over, the charmed life of Humphrey, the cat who treats prime ministers with disdain and sits balefully on red carpets rolled out for dignitaries. Once King Hussein of Jordan had to wait for a policeman to remove him.

Missing, presumed dead, national newspapers said Tuesday, reporting that the long-haired, black-and-white tom who lives at Downing Street hadn't been seen for three months.

Within hours, Humphrey was back. Staff at a military medical college about one-half mile away recognized the picture and realized that the friendly stray they'd been feeding since he showed up three months ago was a VIP.

The Cabinet Office issued a statement in faultless bureaucratese.

"Ministers and staff at Downing Street and the Cabinet Office are delighted to have Humphrey back and he seems very pleased to be home," it said.

There was even a tongue-in-cheek quote from Humphrey himself saying, "It's nice to be back and I'm looking forward to the new parliamentary session."

In reality, Humphrey — named after Sir Humphrey Appleby, the manipulative civil servant in a British TV series "Yes Prime Minister" — was less cooperative.

A shade overweight and showing no sign of a kidney infection he'd had just before vanishing, Humphrey refused to eat in front of photographers the fish and milk offered him by Cabinet clerks. They hugged him anyway.

France names new ambassador to U.S.

PARIS (AP) — France has named Francois Bujon, a former aide to President Jacques Chirac, as its ambassador to the United States.

Bujon, 55, replaces Jacques Andreani, whose term expired, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Wednesday.

Bujon was Chirac's diplomatic and defense adviser when the president was prime minister from 1986-88. He was ambassador to Canada from 1989 to 1991.

He is president of the Harvard Business School Club of France, and has been president of a French consulting firm since 1992.

Expelled Palestinians return to Gaza

ALLENBY BRIDGE, West Bank (AP) — Three busloads of Palestinians, many carrying television sets and laundry bags stuffed with clothes, headed for the PLO-ruled Gaza Strip on Wednesday after being expelled from Libya.

The 171 Palestinians, including dozens of children, came across the Allenby Bridge from Jordan after being stranded on the Libyan-Egyptian border for three weeks. They were among about 1,500 Palestinians deported by Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi to embarrass the PLO for making peace with Israel.

Gadhafi began the deportations last month, apparently to punish the PLO for making no provision in its agreements with Israel for Palestinians who fled the Jewish state after it was created in 1948.

Sami Rass, who worked as a mechanic in Libya for 17 years, said he, his wife and four children left Libya on Sept. 9 and lived in the desert between Libya and Egypt for more than three weeks. They were finally given permission on Saturday to cross into Gaza via the West Bank.

"Gadhafi has destroyed our lives. We just have to start our lives again" said Rass, looking weary and unshaven.

The Palestinians who arrived Wednesday all had valid permits to live in Gaza, Israeli authorities said. Israel has not allowed 44 other Palestinians expelled from Libya to cross into the Gaza Strip because they don't have papers. The 44 have been stuck at the Rafah border crossing with Egypt for more than two weeks.

Ibrahim Abu Dagga, a human rights adviser to PLO leader Yasser Arafat, condemned the deportations as "strange and unhumanitarian."

"We were expecting ... that the Libyan government will support us by all means and support our rights to enable us to continue our struggle to build our homeland," Abu Dagga said in a statement Wednesday.

The statement, which also condemned international sanctions against Libya and Israel's closure of the occupied territories, urged humanitarian organizations, world leaders and "all friends" to help stop the deportations.

Orabi Ismaeel, a 24-year-old university student who came across the Allenby Bridge on Wednesday, said he left Libya without completing his degree in business administration.

"I went to Libya thinking I will find a better situation and a better future, but all my dreams fell through," he said.

Ismaeel said he was cheered by the prospect of returning to a Gaza Strip that came under Palestinian self-rule a year ago.

Former Klan leader Duke meets Zhirinovsky

MOSCOW (AP) — It's a mutual admiration society: David Duke, a former Klan leader, and Vladimir Zhirinovsky, Russia's most strident ultranationalist.

"Zhirinovsky once called me his favorite American politician," Duke said Wednesday. He laughed. "I don't know if it's a compliment or not."

The Louisiana Republican said he met with Zhirinovsky for more than an hour Tuesday. He said they have a lot in common.

"We're nationalists," he said. "And Zhirinovsky is very protective of what you might call the white race."

Duke came to Moscow seeking help for a Louisiana missionary, Charles Songe, who is in trouble with provincial Russian authorities for alleged currency violations. He has been under house arrest since May in Saransk, Russia.

Zhirinovsky

Songe apparently didn't appreciate Duke's effort.

"He's frankly worried to death about it," said Ken Johnson, a spokesman for U.S. Rep. Billy Tauzin, R-La., who is working to obtain Songe's release.

Johnson said he called Songe to tell him about Duke's presence.

"We are well on our way to resolving this matter diplomatically. The last thing we need is for a cowboy to get involved and upset this delicate balance in the negotiations," Johnson said Wednesday.

"If David Duke messes this up, then maybe our next offer will be a prisoner exchange — Duke for Songe."

Arkhipov described the meeting as "warm, friendly" and said the two politicians "discussed many issues concerning Russian-American relations."

Zhirinovsky is a master at the politics of racism, which Duke once practiced as head of the Louisiana Ku Klux Klan. Zhirinovsky promotes a vision of a Slavic, Orthodox Christian Russia with its imperial borders restored. He often threatens to have his enemies deported or shot, and is famous for brawling in the halls of parliament.

After a stint as a Louisiana state legislator, Duke ran unsuccessfully for the U.S. Senate in 1990, for governor in 1991 and in the state's GOP presidential primary in 1992. He said he plans to run for the Senate again in 1996.

23 sentenced to death in China

HONG KONG (AP) — Twenty-three people have been sentenced to death by Chinese courts for crimes including robbery, murder and drug trafficking, news reports said Wednesday.

Six of the sentences for drug crimes were handed down at a rally at a sports stadium in Chengdu, where 40,000 people watched authorities burn 65 pounds of heroin, the China Business Times reported.

Seventeen more people were sentenced to death Tuesday by the Intermediate People's Court in Canton, capital of southern Guangdong province, another Hong Kong newspaper, Ta Kung Pao, reported Wednesday.

The Chinese-language daily did not say if the accused were executed, but the death penalty is usually carried out shortly after sentencing with a bullet to the head.

Cabinet OKs West Bank accord; hurdles remain

JERUSALEM (AP) — Foreign Minister Shimon Peres called it "a present to a world tired of wars" — the Israeli Cabinet's approval Wednesday of a plan to bring self-rule to most of the 1 million Palestinians in the West Bank.

The PLO's executive committee gave the accord approval the day before, and the Middle East peacemakers will gather at the White House today for a formal signing ceremony.

But there are still loose ends that could unravel the deal.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin will meet with PLO chairman Yasser Arafat prior to the signing, and President Clinton may have to do some arm-twisting to get the last details in place.

Three issues — a timetable for Israeli troop withdrawal, the size of an autonomous enclave around the West Bank city of Jericho, and the scope of Palestinian prisoner releases — must be resolved before Thursday's signing.

The accord must also be approved by Israel's 120-member parliament on Oct. 5, and Nissim Zvilli, secretary-general of Rabin's Labor Party, predicts a one-vote victory.

"Nobody knows what will happen if the final agreement is not approved," Zvilli said Wednesday. "There is a danger that it could paralyze the process with the Palestinians."

Israel has agreed to free 2,000 of the 5,500 now held — one group shortly after the signing of the West Bank accord, a second on the eve of Palestinian elections and the rest later. But Israel has refused to grant early release to about 350 Palestinians convicted of killing or wounding Israelis.

Arafat also wants Rabin and Peres to free Sheik Ahmed Yassin, spiritual leader of the Islamic fundamentalist group Hamas, which has carried out a campaign of suicide attacks in an effort to foil the agreement.

Israel has no plans to release any of the 1,700 Islamic activists rounded up since the Israel-PLO agreement was signed Sept. 13, 1993.

An Israeli official said Rabin would not budge on Arafat's demands to expand the autonomy zone around Jericho. The PLO wants territory along the shores of the Jordan River and the Dead Sea, border zones that Israel does not want to give up for security reasons.

An Israeli official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the disagreements might lead to a last-minute crisis before the Washington signing. He said Clinton might have to do some arm-twisting to get the accord signed.

It calls for a troop withdrawal from seven West Bank towns, followed by general elections in which the Palestinians will choose an 82-member Palestinian Council with executive and legislative powers.

Palestinian elections are expected to be held either in January or April, depending on when Israel completes its troop pullback. Israeli officials say that may depend on mundane details like the building of bypass roads so Israelis don't have to drive through Palestinian towns.

But there is no timetable for troop withdrawals yet. An Israeli official who demanded anonymity said there was an understanding that the redeployment would would begin soon in villages around the West Bank town of Jenin and would be completed by December.

"According to the agreement I reached with Shimon Peres, the redeployment ought to begin 10 days after the signature of the accord," Arafat said Wednesday. The provision did not appear in the 400-page agreement because of "some typographical errors in the text," he said.

To prevent possible attacks by Palestinian militants, Israel ordered the West Bank sealed off starting at midnight Wednesday and lasting through Sunday. A closure was imposed on the Gaza Strip at the start of the Jewish New Year on Sunday. Tens of thousands of Palestinians will be unable to reach their jobs in Israel as a result.

About 200 Palestinians marched through Hebron's Old City on Wednesday, protesting that the accord will allow Jewish settlers to stay in the city where a settler massacred 29 Palestinians in 1994. Israeli soldiers barred the marchers from entering the Tomb of the Patriarchs where the massacre took place.

"Only prayer can help us," said Leah Wolf, who came to Israel from New York 18 years ago. "This is not a peace process, it's a suicide process."

Police arrest cultist in shooting of officer

TOKYO (AP) — A top member of the Aum Shinri Kyo cult was arrested Wednesday in connection with a shooting that shocked the country five months ago — the near-fatal attack on Japan's national police chief.

The official, Takaji Kunimatsu, was gunned down as he left his Tokyo apartment building March 30, ten days after a dozen people were killed and 5,500 injured in a nerve gas attack on Tokyo's subways.

Kunimatsu was heading an investigation into the cult, including massive raids two days after the subway attack that turned up tons of chemicals at cult compounds that could have been used to produce the nerve gas.

Many of the cult's top leaders have been arrested in connection with the gassing and a string of other crimes, including murder and kidnapping.

Mitsui Sunaoshi, 28, was arrested Wednesday for allegedly trying to hinder police by calling a television station shortly after Kunimatsu was shot and warning them to call off the investigation of the cult. It was the first arrest in the case.

In the call, Sunaoshi said the head of the Tokyo police and a Cabinet official "would suffer injuries following Kunimatsu" if the investigation continued, police said.

The shooting of Kunimatsu in broad daylight shocked Japanese, already stunned by the subway gassing, who had thought of their country as relatively crime-free.

Sunaoshi belongs to the cult's so-called construction ministry, part of the shadow government established by the cult to rule Japan after the apocalypse predicted by the cult's leader, Shoko Asahara.

Asahara is in custody and goes on trial in October in the subway gassing. He is accused of guiding cult members in making weapons and deadly chemical compounds in preparation for the apocalypse.

Iranian hijacker says he wants to stay in Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Iranian flight attendant who hijacked a passenger plane to Israel last week formally asked for asylum Wednesday, declaring his love for the Jewish people in a petition to an Israeli court.

Reza Jabari, 29, is considering converting to Judaism and wants to find an Israeli wife, said his attorney, Shmuel Sandya. In a petition filed Wednesday in magistrate's court in the southern city of Beersheba, Jabari, a Muslim, argued he "never had the opportunity" to freely choose his religion and was now questioning it.

The Justice Ministry would not comment on the request. But a Foreign Ministry official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the petition was complicated by the fact that Jabari may have to face criminal charges from the Sept. 19 hijacking.

Iran, meanwhile, is seeking Jabari's extradition. Jabari hijacked an airliner carrying 174 passengers and crew from Tehran to the Iranian resort island of Kish, forcing the pilot at gunpoint to fly to Israel.

Lawyer for Colombia's president wounded in attack

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Assailants fired machine guns Wednesday at cars carrying President Ernesto Samper's lawyer and bodyguards, killing two bodyguards and injuring the lawyer.

The attack on Antonio Jose Cancino was reminiscent of the bloody days of the government's war against the Medellin cocaine cartel and threatened to stall the inquiry into whether Samper used money from another drug gang to win the 1994 elections.

A previously unknown group calling itself the Movement for a Dignified Colombia claimed responsibility and said Samper, his wife and other government leaders would be targeted next.

Samper, who was seriously wounded in a 1989 attack by drug cartel gunmen, canceled public appearances Wednesday and met with law enforcement officials to discuss security.

Cancino was present on Tuesday when the head of a congressional commission questioned Samper about allegations that the Cali cartel — the world's biggest drug gang — donated more than $6 million to his election campaign.

Five gunmen jumped from a van and fired automatic rifles at Cancino's Mercedes Benz and his bodyguards' car, a witness told RCN radio. Cancino got out and was shot, the unidentified witness said. Cancino, 55, was taken to a military hospital, where doctors treated wounds in his right arm and hand. His driver and another bodyguard were also injured. Hours later, a telephone caller told radio stations that the group claiming responsibility wanted Samper to resign and criticized the president for trying to "undermine" the probe of his campaign.

Ismaili Muslim leader's divorce leads to jewelry auction

GENEVA (AP) — Saying they no longer go with her single lifestyle, the Aga Khan's former wife is selling $15 million worth of jewels including a deep blue, 13.78-carat, heart-shaped diamond.

"Princess Salimah is changing her life," said Eveline de Proyart, a spokeswoman for Christie's auction house. "The only reason she has given for the sale is that she was accustomed to wearing such jewelry when she was married but now they are of less use to her."

The jewels will be displayed in 10 cities, including New York and Los Angeles, before the Nov. 13 auction in Geneva, Christie's said.

Many of the pieces, by jewelers such as Van Cleef and Arpel, Cartier, Boucheron and Bulgari, were designed for the princess.

The highlight of the collection is a deep blue, heart-shaped diamond of 13.78 carats known as "The Begum Blue," part of a necklace made up of 41 heart-shaped diamonds which is expected to fetch over $10.2 million.

Orders fuel economy talk

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Factory orders for expensive, long-lasting goods rose more rapidly in August than they had in a year, rekindling talk of a resurgent economy.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday durable-goods orders shot up 4.9 percent last month after two straight declines. The increase was the largest since orders soared 6.5 percent in August 1994.

Analysts said the surprisingly large advance — combined with an improving housing market and steady consumer confidence — is encouraging. But they said the pace of growth is not becoming rapid.

"You're bouncing back after some pronounced weakness," said economist Stuart Hoffman of PNC Bank Corp. "I would not call that a boom."

Analysts said the durable-goods report reinforces evidence of improving growth that prompted the Federal Reserve on Tuesday to forgo cutting interest rates. Many analysts said rates could remain stable for the balance of the year if the economy continues to strengthen.

Volatile orders for autos accounted for about half the surge in durable-goods orders last month as assembly lines started up after a summer shutdown to retool for the new models.

Orders also were up strongly for industrial equipment, primary metals and military goods. Electronic equipment, including computers, was the only major category that fell.

The Commerce Department said orders for durable goods totaled a seasonally adjusted $163.9 billion, up from $156.2 billion in July. For the year so far, new orders are 8.1 percent higher than the same period in 1994.

Orders fell 1.8 percent in July and slipped 0.3 percent in June. The economy slowed dramatically in the spring, growing at a 1.1 percent annual rate.

Micron workers enjoy bonus checks

The Associated Press

BOISE — Micron Technology has doled out $28 million in profit-sharing funds to its 6,300 employees in the Treasure Valley, the largest amount ever paid by the Boise-based computer chip manufacturer in a single quarter.

Some will stash the extra cash, while others plan to blow it. It is a plus for the Boise economy.

The bonus checks have been much bigger the past few years as Micron has become more profitable. Company spokesman Kipp Bedard would not discuss individual payments, but if the quarter's profits were distributed equally, each employee would get about $4,460. Micron distributes 10 percent of each quarter's profits, Bedard said. Everyone who has worked at the company six months or more receives a minimum payment, and an additional amount is paid based on salary.

Most workers say the profit-sharing checks are great — but not something to count on. The red-hot market for computer memory chips could turn Arctic at any time. "I try hard not to plan on it. It could be gone tomorrow," said Donna Bankhead, who has worked for the company about two years. She got her first bonus check 18 months ago. "I remember people ... used to joke about spending their bonus check on a meal at Burger King."

Tax incentives balloon to $190 million

The Associated Press

LEHI, Utah — The financial incentive package to lure Micron Technology to Utah has more than tripled since the computer company decided last March to build a manufacturing plant in Lehi.

The $35 million offer for site improvements and utilities has ballooned to $123.6 million. Coupled with $66 million in state incentives available to the Boise-based semiconductor company, the total incentive package approaches $190 million.

Newspaper group: Industry in good shape, despite newsprint costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's newspapers will continue strong growth despite the latest round of newsprint price increases that pushed costs to record highs, says the chairman of an industry trade group.

Uzal Martz Jr., chairman of the Newspaper Association of America, said U.S. newspapers posted advertising revenues of $16.7 billion in the first six months of 1995 — the best first-half figure in seven years.

"Newspapers had hoped newsprint prices would stabilize after the last series of price hikes, but this latest increase and lack of certainty in newsprint pricing should not adversely affect the long-term health of the newspaper industry," Martz said Tuesday.

Kenneth Berents, media analyst for Wheat First Butcher Singer Inc., a Richmond, Va.-based brokerage firm, agreed. But he said a number of issues, including changes in retailing, advertising and consumer buying habits, may have longer-lasting effects on the industry.

"The newspaper industry has been scrambling, and in some cases very effectively, in trying to overcome those things," he said. "The bottom line is that the companies themselves have to change the way they do business."

The price of newsprint is more expensive than ever before, after having nearly doubled in the past two years. And publishers are undertaking numerous efforts to save costs.

A Sept. 1 increase pushed newsprint prices to all-time highs of $750 to $760 a metric ton, according to Mark X. Diverio, a paper industry analyst at UBS Securities Inc. That marks an increase of about 85 percent from the first quarter of 1994 when the low price hovered near $410 per ton.

Some publishers have begun to reduce the size of their pages or eliminate sections in attempts to conserve newsprint. Some are trimming costs elsewhere and others are closing their operations altogether.

The Houston Post closed this year, citing newsprint costs as one reason. The Los Angeles Times is cutting hundreds of jobs, partly due to newsprint prices. And some newspaper companies have reported that the high newsprint costs are hurting profits.

The newspaper association is trying to help, and has developed several publications to help publishers use less newsprint and cut costs.

"Newspapers today have streamlined their costs and production operations and are more efficient and better equipped to deal with newsprint price fluctuations today than in the past," said Cathleen Black, president and chief executive officer of the Reston, Va.-based association.

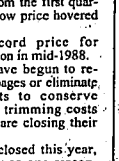

For healthy portfolio, fund investments need culling

NEW YORK (AP) — As each year heads into its last few months, some investors make a practice of subjecting the mutual funds they own to an annual review.

The timing is right, since autumn already represents the prime season for year-end tax planning. An examination of your fund investments can serve two purposes at the same time.

The aim of a general review is certainly worthy: To be a disciplined investor, rather than just a random collector, by making sure that your funds are living up to your original hopes for them and still fit with what you are trying to accomplish.

Besides, it makes sense to demand as much of funds you have owned for a while as you would of any you are considering for the first time.

Some fund "sell" decisions are simple enough — for instance, when you need the money for other purposes, or when an investment has reached an objective you set, such as a college tuition payment now coming due.

What can be tougher is to decide when a fund should be sold on its own merits or demerits. "Pulling the trigger on a disappointing fund is never easy," says the Value Line Mutual Fund Survey.

Any fund that has changed its name, its manager or its explicit method of operating demands close scrutiny. If it is now following a course that no longer suits your purposes, it becomes a candidate for culling even if it is still earning good performance scores from fund research organizations and the financial press.

What if a fund just isn't producing the kind of return you hoped to see?

In the case of a stock fund that had a strong record until recently, Value Line suggests allowing a grace period of at least a year or two. That way, you lessen your chance of selling out merely because the fund employs strategies or favors categories of stocks that have fallen temporarily out of fashion.

"Bond funds, however, generally deserve less 'down time' than stock funds," Value Line says. "That's because all bond funds, in a sense, drink from the same trough. There are fewer variables, in the sense that bonds of a certain quality generally provide a similar yield."

You also may be prompted to consider leaving a fund if you are unhappy with its fees and expenses. This can happen, for instance, in cases where managers were previously subsidizing a fund by waiving some or all expense charges, but have discontinued that waiver.

Or perhaps you got started in fund investing by buying a fund with a load, or sales charge, through a broker, but have since educated yourself to the point that you now want to concentrate on no-loads you can choose on your own.

That doesn't prevent you from hanging on to good load funds you previously purchased, especially if the sales charge was collected up front. As Paul Merriman, a money manager and adviser in Seattle, observed, "once you pay the load, your money is gone. Getting out of the fund won't get it back.

"Therefore, if you are already in that position, there is no particular advantage to sell that fund just because of the load."

The flip side of this problem can come up when you own fund shares with a back-end load, or sales charge imposed at the time you sell, which typically is reduced by stages the longer you own the fund.

Naturally, you want to avoid paying such charges wherever possible. But if a fund presents serious drawbacks or disappointments otherwise, suggests Merriman, "don't keep a fund just because of its back-end load.

"Ask yourself: Does this fund fit within the plan I should have? Does it have a good record? Reputable management? Reasonable fees? If your answers are positive, then your best bet is probably to stick with it."

By the same token, Merriman says, "if this is a fund you would definitely not invest in again, consider selling in order to find something more suitable for yourself."

Dow slashes 53-point loss to 3 on bounce from bonds

Knight-Ridder News Service

CHICAGO — The Dow Jones Industrial Average closed down 3.25 points at 4762.35 Wednesday, slashing an earlier 53-point loss made on a combination of weak bond prices and selling in the technology sector.

A short-covering rebound in bonds toward the end of the session improved the stock market's tone. Interest-rate sensitive bank stocks rebounded and utilities stocks — which had held relatively firm despite the earlier loss — extended gains.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On the 30th day of JANUARY, 1996, at the hour of 10:15 A.M., of said day, (recognized local time), in the Office of First American Title Company, 260 3rd Avenue North, Twin Falls, in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, First American Title Company of Idaho, Inc., an Idaho Corporation, as successor trustee, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash,in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real property, situated in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, and described as follows, to-wit:

Township 10 South, Range 16 East of the Boise Meridian, Twin Falls County, Idaho.
Section 16: That part of the SE¼SW¼, described as follows:
BEGINNING at a point which is South 89°57' West, 73.00 feet from the South quarter corner of said Section; thence
South 89°57' West, 400.00 feet; thence
South 0°22' West, 217.8 feet; thence
North 89°57' East, 400.00 feet to THE POINT OF BEGINNING.

The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113 Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed the address of 2144 East 3800 North, Filer, Idaho, is sometimes associated with said real property.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the deed of trust executed by THANE E LANCASTER AND F. NADINE LANCASTER, husband and wife, as grantors, to FIRST AMERICAN TITLE COMPANY OF IDAHO, INC., an Idaho Corporation, as successor trustee, for the benefit and security of WEST ONE BANK, IDAHO, previously doing business as The Idaho First National Bank, as beneficiary, dated October 14, 1988, recorded October 20, 1988, as Instrument No. 946180 and re-recorded November 4, 1988 as Instrument No. 946770, and modified by Modification recorded April 3, 1992, as Instrument No. 92004550, Mortgage Records of Twin Falls County, Idaho.

THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506 (4)(b), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay when due, under Deed of Trust Note dated October 14, 1988 and Modification dated February 23, 1992, the monthly payments for Principal, Interest and Impounds of $200.00 per month for the months of June through September, 1995 and all subsequent payments until the date of sale or reinstatement, interest accruing at 9.00% per annum, accrued interest owing in the amount of $302.99, also delinquent and unpaid taxes for 1992, 1993 and 1994 and the principal balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $15,548.37, plus accruing interest. All delinquent payments are now due, together with accruing late charges and interest, unpaid and accruing taxes, assessments, trustee's fees, attorney's fees, and any amounts advanced to protect the security associated with this foreclosure and that the beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

Notice is hereby given by the City Council for the City of Twin Falls, Idaho, that a public hearing will be held on Mondays, October 16, November 6, and November 20, 1995, at the hour of 6:00 o'clock, P.M., in the Council Chambers, City Hall, located at 321 Second Avenue East, Twin Falls, Idaho, to hear a request by:

KENNETH L. SCHMIDT
Appeals from the decision of the City Planning and Zoning Commission in denying his request for a Non-Conforming Building Expansion Permit which would allow the applicant to add a 7.0' x 7.5' two-sided enclosure with roof to a building which does not currently meet setback requirements and would encroach an additional 7' into the South Park Avenue West centerline setback area at 111 South Park Avenue West in Twin Falls.
The City Council may act upon this appeal on the first or second meeting date. If that occurs, no further public hearings will be held on the issue.
Any and all persons desiring to comment may appear and be heard at the appointed time. The decision of the Council will be final.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"It would not be better if things happened to men just as they wish."
—Heraclitus

Today's West got most of what he wished for: a trump winner and a club ruff. What he didn't get was a plus score, a prize available with a more effective opening lead.

West led his singleton club to South's king and South cashed two high trumps. When the suit failed to split, he led a third round to West's queen. West led a cagey heart queen to East's ace and East returned a club for West to ruff. Unfortunately for the defense, when West tried to cash his heart king, South replied with a ruff of his own. South's diamond losers then went on dummy's long clubs.

"I thought we had him," confessed an unhappy West. "Had I not falsecarded to talk you into taking your heart ace, I would have missed my club ruff."

West missed something more important. A defender who holds four trumps is usually better placed if he chooses a forcing game rather than trying for ruffs. Observe the difference in today's layout.

Against the heart king lead, South ruffs at trick two and cashes two high trumps. When he gives West his trump trick, West punches again in hearts and South draws the last trump. However, when the club suit breaks badly, South has only nine winners and the forcing game succeeds.

THEISEN MOTORS PROUDLY PRESENTS...

Quality You Can See, Hear & Feel!

This category encompasses Sable as a whole. "Quality you can see" is best defined as craftsmanship – the attention to detail that showcases the thought and care that went into Sable's overall desing and construction. "Quality you can hear" is the quiet ride defined by the elimination of wind noise, squeaks and rattles as well as the enhanced sound of the powertrain or the solid sound of a door closing. "Quality you can feel" is evidenced in th sumptuous interior - rich cloth seat coverings, supple leather-like vinyls and optional leather-trimmed seats, with hides extending to seat and head restraint sides.
